LITTLE NATIONS IN LAST STAND AGAINST VETO

Make New Fight on Big 5 Plan

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

San Francisco, Cal., June 10—The battle of the veto broke out afresh this week-end in the world security conference.

The small nations, led by Australian Foreign Minister Evatt and New Zealand Prime Minister Fraser made a last stand against the decree of the Big Five powers—the United States, Great Britain, Russia, France, and China--that peaceful settlement of an international dispute shall be subject to veto by any one of the Big Five not a party to the controversy.

While not objecting to the veto by a great power of the use of force against itself or against another nation accused of aggression, the small nations demand the abolition entirely of the veto of peaceful settlements.

Follow Soviet Capitulation

Within 48 hours after Russia surrendered to the other four powers on the question of free discussion of peaceful settlements by the prospective world peace league's security council, the battle was resumed at a stormy session of a conference committee last night.

Sen. Connally [D., Tex.] of the American delegation was endeavoring to get approval of the voting procedure on the basis of the Big Five interpretation that the veto while not applying to consideration of a dispute would apply to a decision to invoke a formal investigation, conciliation, arbitration, or other pacific measures.

Previous Stands Recalled

Prof. C. K. Webster of the British delegation was discussing the veto of investigation of a dispute. British Foreign Secretary Eden, when he was at the conference, had stated that the veto would not apply to peaceful settlements and the British information service had been compelled to correct Eden. Then Alexander Cadogan, British undersecretary of foreign affairs, had said that the veto would not apply to investigation of a dispute.

"The statement [by Cadogan]," said Prof. Webster, "was undoubtedly an inadvertence."

"We might as well be honest about it," Fraser interrupted. "Copies of Cadogan's statement were printed and distributed to members of the committee. He had ample opportunity to revise his remarks if he had wished to do so. He did not."

Sen. Connally objected to Fraser's remark about "being honest about it." He said it reflected on Cadogan's honesty. After more altercation in a tense diplomatic atmosphere Fraser said he had no intention of impugning Cadogan's integrity and withdrew the remark that had given offense.

Considerable Complaint

Nevertheless, in the ensuing debate there was considerable implied, if not open, complaint by the small nations that the Big Five had first deceived them and finally ridden rough shod over them.

The meeting broke up with no action taken and the small nations determined to continue the fight to-

Canada Votes Today; to Pick Parliament

BY ARTHUR EVANS
(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

OTTAWA, Ont., June 10—Canada's national election goes to the voters who tomorrow will elect the 245 members of the house of commons to establish the next government of the dominion. The finish of the campaign was in a welter of conflicting claims from the major rival parties—the Liberals, led by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, and the Progressive-Conservatives, headed by John Bracken. King and Bracken are contending for the office of prime minister.

Mackenzie King

750,000 Voters in Service

A record number of candidates—954 for the 245 seats—has been entered. About 7,500,000 Canadians are estimated to be eligible voters, a growth of 640,000 since the last federal election in 1940. Of the voters about 750,000 are estimated to be in war service. Five years ago the total vote was 4,672,000.

In the national capital here, most of the politically wise believe King and the Liberals will elect the largest bloc of house members, and that King will retain his place.

Both Make Strong Bids

But whether the party will elect a clear majority is uncertain, due to the plethora of minor sectional parties and independents.

Politicians have been put into a dither by the Ontario election a week ago, a sweep for Conservative Premier George Drew, and the effect it may have had on the federal election. Bracken and Drew have been declaring Ontario spells the defeat of King.

King has made post-war problems the prime issue.

Bracken and the Conservatives, or Tories, have emphasized the man power, or conscription, question.

C. C. F. Expected to Gain

The Coöperative Commonwealth federation, Socialist, is expected to increase its seats in the house—it had 10 in the last commons—but its collapse in the Ontario election is thought to have removed any possibility of its electing the second largest number of members and becoming the official opposition party. This has been its chief objective.

Labor is divided. The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, which has affiliations with the American Federation of Labor, in general is favoring King and the Liberal party, but following its traditional policy, has not told its membership the way to vote. The Canadian Congress of Labor [CIO] is openly supporting the C. C. F.

The soldier vote in case of a close election might tip the scales in some ridings where the vote on house members is close. Results of the service vote are not due until eight days after the election.

80,000 Pray in Holy Hour for Fighters

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS

Pageantry of Christian faith and patriotism featured last night's massive holy hour of the Holy Name societies of the Roman Catholic archdiocese of Chicago as 80,000 prayed and sang and entered into the ancient liturgy of western Christendom in Soldiers' field. Tribute to the families of the 4,210 fighting men of the archdiocese who lost their lives in service was a touching highlight.

The entire hour was dedicated to the theme of the Christian family, and as those bereft of fighting sons moved six abreast in close formation toward the altar thru the guard of honor composed of Chicago firemen and police, the throng became silent.

Prayers for 208,000

The field flag was raised and lowered to half staff, three volleys crashed, taps sounded and then was echoed from the rim of the great horseshoe with muffled bugle. The throng stood silent, unbidden.

The 208,000 Catholic boys from the archdiocese, of whom 23,954 are among the missing, wounded, and prisoners, were remembered in a spiritual bouquet representing a million rosaries together with hundreds of thousands of holy communions and masses offered in their behalf, it was announced. The patriotic hour moved on thru the pledge of allegiance to the flag to the climax of devotions in the holy hour celebrated by Archbishop Stritch.

Fifty choral groups from the city's parishes, together with the Cathedral choristers and the archdiocesan priests' choir, participated in the devotions. The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Daniel Byrnes, chairman of the holy hour committee, addressed the throng on the meaning of the hour, and the Rev. Edward J. Kelly, archdiocesan Holy Name union director, led the recitation of the Angelus.

Prayer for American Home

Another deeply moving moment was the multitude's response to the Eucharistic process which nearly encircled the field around the gold star families.

Archbishop Stritch's meditations were prayers to Christ for the renewed sanctity of the American home. He said: "Some of our gravest social maladies are directly traceable to family failures. Even the stability of our economic structure, which is based on private ownership, is endangered because of the instability of the basic ownership title, the homestead title."

FRENCH ANNEX ITALY BORDER TOWN, SAYS MILAN NEWSPAPER

BY P. E. BRIQUET
(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

CHIASSO, Switzerland, June 10—The French have annexed Ventimiglia, Italian border town on the Riviera, according to Corriere d'Informazione of Milan. All Italian flags were taken down and the French tricolor hoisted. The new boundary was established by the French on the Borghetto river at the entrance to Bordighere, a winter resort. The town is in ruins and the population of 15,000 has been reduced to 2,000.

The population of Ventimiglia was evacuated by the Germans and neo-Fascists last winter when the town was on the front line. Now the French will allow to return to Ventimiglia only those born there. The motive, it is said is to prepare for a plebiscite to confirm the annexation.

The same fate is said to be in store for the Italian border town of Brigatenda, about 35 miles north of Ventimiglia, in the French-Italian Alps.

15TH ARMY MAY BE REASSIGNED TO PACIFIC WAR

PARIS, June 11 [Monday]—(AP)—The army newspaper Stars and Stripes said today the United States 15th army "is expected to cease operations shortly" and may be transferred to the Pacific. The newspaper, in a dispatch from Wiesbaden, Germany, quoted unidentified "officials," said reassignment of Lt. Gen. Gerow's forces would follow "official announcement of the occupation zones of the 12th army group."

Relief of the 15th will "make it available for a possible shift to the Pacific," the article added. "The fact that the 3d and 7th army headquarters have been designated for the army of occupation does not mean that troops now in those armies are necessarily destined for occupation," the newspaper said, declaring that the redeployment situation is bringing about an almost complete revampment of personnel.

The United States 9th army is halting operations June 15 and the 1st army already is headed for the Pacific.

Hitler Not Here: Wouldn't Have Him, Spain Says

MADRID, Spain, June 10 — Foreign Minister Felix Lequerica issued a statement today denying Russian reports that Adolf Hitler had found shelter in Spain. "Hitler, married or single, alive or dead, is not on Spanish soil nor would he be allowed here; and, if he entered he would not be given shelter," the statement said.

Hidden Valley Survivors to Start on Trek

BY RALPH MORTON

HOLLANDIA, Dutch New Guinea, June 10 (AP)—The first tedious phase of the projected air rescue in the "hidden valley of Shangri-La" is expected to get under way at any moment.

It entails a 10 mile trek by a WAC, an army officer and a noncom, survivors of a plane crash May 13 which killed 20 other army sightseers—thru dense jungle growth from a mountain saddle to the valley floor.

The trip from the saddle, where the trio has been staying since the crash, to the valley, where a glider landing field is being built by paratroopers, will require at least five days.

Gets First Interview

Two survivors of the transport plane crash gave me their first newspaper interview Friday.

Using a parachuted walkie-talkie, they spoke to me as I was flown in a plane over the valley.

The radio reception was so uncertain that I was only able to speak briefly to the two before it became unsatisfactory.

"What's the first thing you want to do when you get back safely?" I asked 30 year old WAC Corp. Margaret Hastings, of Oswego, N. Y.

"The main thing I want to do is to stay in the army," replied the sports loving girl who gave up a good job in New York to serve with the WACs.

"Tell my folks I'm okay and not to worry about me," she said.

Injuries Healing

Sgt. Kenneth W. Decker, Kelso, Wash., a second survivor, said his slight injuries were healing nicely and he expected no difficulty in walking out.

The third survivor is Lt. John B. McCollom, of Trenton, Mo., who daily inquires of supply planes what is the latest news on what is going on in the world.

Margaret Truman Sings in Old Home Town Choir

Independence, Mo., June 10 (AP)—President Truman's daughter, Margaret, slipped quietly into her usual place in the choir of the Trinity Episcopal church this morning in her first public appearance here since her father became chief executive. "No, she didn't sing a solo," the Rev. H. B. Whitehead said. "We're not making any fuss over her. She's just a regular member of the choir as she's always been."

WOULD FIGHT FOR PEACE IF NECESSARY: IKE

FRANKFURT ON THE MAIN, Germany, June 10 (AP)—Gen. Eisenhower received soviet Russia's highest award, the jeweled Order of Victory, from Marshal Zhukov today and said that the allies "are going to have peace even if we have to fight for it."

In a toast of praise to Zhukov, commander of Russian occupation forces in Germany, Eisenhower said:

"Marshal Zhukov has praised me in extravagant terms, my job and my performance of my job in the war. It seems a fitting occasion to me to point out that I have had the advice of the most skilful soldiers and diplomats that two great countries [America and Britain] could produce, soldiers, sailors, airmen, and diplomats.

"Realizing that only in unity is there strength, they have subordinated themselves to my commands with perfect loyalty regardless of the claims on them from within their own countries.

"Never Once Deviated"

"To these men I owe an immeasurable debt of gratitude. Those people have worked at my side in adversity and in prosperity and have never once deviated one inch from the instructions laid down.

"I cannot name names for the simple reason there have been so many who have performed so loyally that it would be an injustice if I named a single soldier. But I know those men intimately and I know what they want.

"They want peace.

"They want an opportunity for our farmers to raise a little more corn next year. They want an opportunity for our miners to live a little better next year.

"All of us who are right thinking want the common man of all nations to have opportunities that we fought to preserve for them.

"Speakers for Allied Forces"

"They want the opportunities that will let all nations that have been engaged in this war go forward together to greater prosperity —not for us sitting around this table—but for the masses that we represent.

"That means peace.

"Speaking for the allied forces, I say, we are going to have peace even if we have to fight for it.

"On two occasions now I have had the great honor of meeting high officials of the soviet government. It is my feeling that in the basic desires of all of us they are one with us.

"Regardless of the methods by which we arrive at that goal, that is what we are struggling for.

"I cannot speak for any other individual; in fact, while I am expressing what is in my heart and mind, I am speaking for no one except Ike Eisenhower.

"But I believe that there is not any single man around this table that would not give back all the

HAMBURG BECOMING CIRCUS CITY AGAIN; NO GERMANS ADMITTED

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

HAMBURG, Germany, June 10—Hamburg is to have a circus again. The city once was the circus capital of Europe; the home of the famous Hagenbeck circus which disintegrated during the war.

The new circus will provide recreation for the British occupation forces who, it is expected, will number 54,000 in the Hamburg area alone.

A big top formerly used by Hagenbeck will house a circus in about a week, with a seating capacity of 2,000. Germans will not be permitted to attend. The performers are all displaced persons—Russians, Poles, and Czechs.

NAZIS GONE, BUT BRITISH LINGER; BELGIANS FRET

BY DAVID DARRAH
(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

BRUSSELS, Belgium, June 10 — Some aspects of liberation are beginning to wear on the Belgian people. They are wearied of prolonged occupation by the British after four years of occupation by the Germans. The Belgians are friendly enough and make all the money they can out of the soldiers, but many would like to see foreign uniforms disappear.

Military control becomes irksome, the Belgians say, after so many years, and they talk openly now of still being occupied. The streets daily are overcrowded with soldiers.

Altho the number of troops stationed here has been reduced, new soldiers constantly come in on leave.

For every little thing the Belgian government has to go, hat in hand, and ask the British commanding officer if it will be all right. Today, a month after peace, a Belgian cannot go into a cafe and use the telephone. Local telephone calls are still under military control and are restricted. Why, is not explained. They never were in Paris since the early days of the war.

Mere Change of Color

Where is freedom since liberation and peace? the people ask, and complain that the feldgrau [field gray] occupation has only been succeeded by the khaki occupation. Many people think military restrictions are being unduly prolonged.

A writer in a weekly paper complained:

"Let's not turn our backs to facts. The cursed field gray has only made way for the adored khaki. But it's always a color. We are no longer Belgians. We are cosmopolite.

"We can't make a gesture, we can't write a word, make a decision, give an order, without all that—sometimes in advance—being dictated, verified, the seams turned out and examined in detail, by our liberating authorities.

"Do you want to see your mother in France? Try to get there. Want to telephone from the corner cafe? Well, just try it. Like to stop in a cafe at 2 in the morning after a night out? It will be closed. Like to start a new newspaper? Ask the military authorities for permission. Want to write to your best friend? Don't forget to put the kind of language you are writing in on the envelope. As a writer, would you like to say a few words in behalf of the Walloons, or some other political cause? Don't risk it—you will be prohibited."

Appeals to Allies

The writer then said all this is taking place long after peace and the departure of the Germans. He added: "Don't leave the liberty you talked so much about before you came lying on the road behind you. Allies, try to be what we thought you were during our long torment and not such as you are showing yourselves to be now."

When the curfew was lifted this last week, the consent of the British command had first to be obtained.

Newspapers recount that British soldiers went along with Belgian police in making a black market raid, and street merchants caught selling illegal merchandise were hauled away in a royal air force truck.

GI'S MAY BUY PARIS SOUVENIRS FREE OF TAXES

PARIS, June 10 [Reuters]—GIs in France soon may be exempted from paying luxury taxes on souvenirs and will be able to buy other commodities at substantially reduced prices. Minister of Finance Rene Pleven today disclosed a plan under which allied troops in France will be supplied with vouchers. In the case of such luxury articles as perfumes and silks the price will be reduced by as much as 80 per cent.

Memorial Services Held at Greek Town Nazis Razed

ATHENS, June 10 (AP) — In the ruins of Distomo, 80 miles northwest of Athens, Greeks held memorial services today for 229 men, women, and children slain when the Germans razed the village a year ago. The Greek minister of the interior and Lincoln MacVeagh, American minister, headed a group of civil and military authorities who attended the ceremonies.

'DEATH STAND' LINE SHELLED BY FLEET GUNS

U.S. Fighters Gain 800 Yards

BULLETIN

CANBERRA, Australia, June 11 (Monday)—(AP) — Acting Prime Minister J. B. Chifley announced today that troops of the Australian 9th division had made a new landing on Japanese occupied territory in British Borneo. The exact point where the operation was carried out was not disclosed.

[Other news of attacks on Borneo and in the Philippines on page 3.]

GUAM, June 11 [Monday]—(AP)—The American 10th army launched a full powered drive against the Japanese death stand line on the Yaeju-Dake escarpment of southern Okinawa yesterday, with the 96th infantry division in the center gaining 800 to 1,000 yards in a frontal thrust up the steepest slopes.

The big guns of heavy warships delivered a thunderous weight of supporting fire for the attackers all along the line, and fighter bombers strafed, bombed and hurled rockets into cave positions in the 15 square miles still held by the Japanese.

On the west flank of the line, amphibious tractors with 75 millimeter guns gave close support to the 1st marine division, which advanced thru Itoman town on the west coast. It attacked the important Japanese positions on Kunishi ridge and seized a hill between Itoman and Yuaz town.

Repulse Two Jap Attacks

The 7th infantry division on the east coast near Hanagusuku repulsed two strong Japanese counter-attacks and made small gains in the center next to the 96th division sector.

The general American attack, launched at 7:30 a. m., apparently caught the Japanese off balance. Altho evidently not expecting a full scale assault, the Japanese reacted rapidly and soon were resisting with small arms, automatic weapons and the heaviest artillery fire they have employed since the fall of their Shuri line to the north.

The Japanese fired 105 millimeter [four inch] guns almost point blank against the Americans toiling up the escarpment, while machine guns and mortars contributed to the violent defense of the rugged coral slopes.

Cleaning Up on Oroku

With all elements of the 1st marine division shifted to the southern drive, the 6th marine division alone took over the task of cleaning out the hotly defended pocket of Japanese on the Oroku peninsula. The 6th was making good progress, reporting gains up to 1,000 yards into the northeast corner of the pocket, which was less than three square miles in extent.

The Japanese counter-attacks against the 7th infantry on the east flank were the sixth and seventh in 36 hours, as the enemy strove desperately to eliminate the threat to the key hill called "95." The 7th division men held onto their limited gains, however, and pressed the fight for the hill.

On Okinawa, army and marine commanders prepared their troops for possible banzai attacks, one of the Japanese favorite deathstand tactics.

The remaining Japanese, cut into two pockets and estimated to number 15,000 to 19,000, were being depleted at the rate of almost 1,000 a day, Maj. Gen. John R. Hodge estimated.

Can Come Any Time

Hodge, commander of the 10th army's 24th corps, said he expected a Japanese banzai charge or a rush to death over the island's southern cliffs any time. It will come soon, said Hodge, "when we compress them until they explode."

Nimitz on Sunday announced that Japanese dead thru Friday totaled 67,703, of an estimated original garrison of 85,000.

The Japanese continued to send suicidal airmen into the Okinawa area and sank a light American vessel [a destroyer or smaller] on Sunday morning. The ship went down very quickly but first reports indicated casualties were light.

On Saturday six Japanese planes were shot down over Okinawa, and on Sunday Thunderbolts of the Okinawa based 318th United States fighter command destroyed 17 Japanese planes in raids on Kyushu, southern Japanese home island.

Fleet search Mariners sank a small cargo ship and damaged a large coastal cargo ship off Korea yesterday and on the same day navy search privateers damaged three small cargo ships in the Tsushima straits.

Drive Wedge Thru Japs

WITH THE U. S. 1ST MARINE DIVISION ON OKINAWA, June 8 [Delayed]—(AP)—The 7th regiment of American marines drove a wedge completely thru the Japanese defenders of southern Okinawa today and a bold little band of cargo carrying tractors coming in from the sea met them on the coast.

Protected by a fleet of armored tractors equipped with 75 mm. tank howitzers, the amphibious tractors brought in the first food, water, clothing, and ammunition to reach the southernmost marine unit in nine days.

Meanwhile, altho muddy fields are rapidly drying out, there are few good roads in southern Okinawa and numerous parachute drops of supplies from marine planes are continuing. More than 50,000 pounds of supplies have been dropped to the division since it began its southern Okinawa push.

Uncertain of Landing Beach

Six LVTs [cargo carrying amphibious tractors] started out from the Naha area uncertain as to what landing beach southward was not held by the Japanese.

"We went in three columns with platoon armored tanks on each flank to reply to any shore fire," an officer said. "There wasn't any firing, thank God. We found the reef smooth, luckily, and went in in response to signals from shore. Second battalion marines met us at a seawall and seemed very glad to get their first supplies in nine days except what they carried in on their backs.

"The marines had several stretcher cases and walking wounded which we loaded into two LVTs and sent out to a cruiser which had been giving supporting fire."

Lt. Byron A. Swedberg, of Rock Island, Ill., had charge of the cargo tractors and Capt. Wilfred Le Francois commanded the armored tanks.

Among those accompanying Swedberg were Pvt. Frank Martinez, Gary, Ind.; Pvt. Oral Randall, St. Joseph, Mich.; Pvt. Milo Peterson, Orleans, Mich., and Pvt. Richard M. Dillon, Burlington, Ia.

Extensions on Flame Throwers

WITH THE U. S. 10TH ARMY, OKINAWA, June 10 (AP) — Battle weary American doughboys, their eyes hollow and bloodshot from lack of sleep, were using flame throwing tanks with 500 foot extension hoses to pour burning death on cave entrenched Japanese along the honeycombed Yaeju-Dake escarpment today.

On the slopes of one hill, a main left anchor of this escarpment fortress of white coral rock, troops of Lt. Col. Lee A. Wallace of Gagetown, Mich., counted 85 caves. There are few approaches to the escarpment. On the seaward side are high coral boulders overgrown with brush. One American officer described the fighting as similar to that in wild west motion pictures.

Seventh division infantrymen were knocking out Japanese guns with grenades as well as flame throwers. Capt. Lauren K. Soth of Ames, Ia., said it was "some of the most savage fighting of the campaign."

EMPTY PLEDGES OF A FREE PRESS FOUND IN EUROPE

Washington, D. C., June 10 (AP)—A committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors who traveled around the world in the interest of free flowing news reported today they found little press freedom under war time conditions.

They said they got many pledges of post-war coöperation from foreign government leaders but described some of those pledges as "lip service."

The directors of the A. S. N. E. which sponsored the mission, made public the report of the three who made the tour—Wilbur Forrest, assistant editor of the New York Herald-Tribune and A. S. N. E. vice president; Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta constitution, and Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the Columbia university graduate school of journalism.

The main objective of the committee was to have included in forthcoming peace treaties the pledges of governments "not to censor news at the source, not to use the press as an instrument of national policy; and to permit a free flow of news in and out of signatory countries."

EDITOR ACCUSES LONDON POLES OF TERRORISM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, June 10—The Polish exile government in London tonight was accused of operating concentration camps in Scotland and waging a campaign of terrorism among Poles who wish to return to the Russian-occupied homeland. The charges were made by Jan Jagodzinski, head of Polpress, the Lublin Polish regime's news agency here. He was arrested in his Fleet street office Friday on charges of desertion from the Polish army but was released in Scotland yesterday pending possible court martial.

The Polish ministry of information here denied it maintained any concentration camps in Scotland and insisted the editor was confined only briefly there in "normal detention barracks."

Jagodzinski claimed that in the prison camps and among their military police the London Poles are relying strongly on men who served in the German army.

JAP WAR COULD LAST TWO YEARS, STILWELL SAYS

OKINAWA, June 7 [Delayed]—(AP)—Gen. Stilwell said today it "is quite possible that we will have to fight in Manchuria" even should the Japanese home islands fall first. He predicted the Pacific war easily could last at least two years longer.

In his first interview on his inspection tour of Pacific troops, the commanding general of the army ground forces told war correspondents that many people in the United States believe the Nipponese can be bombed out of the war but "personally I believe it will require ground action in addition to anything done by bombings. I don't see any reason to expect a crack up of the Japanese," he said.

Stilwell, who has been living on the front since he came here several days ago for a first hand look at the troops he was charged with training, said he had "seen nothing here that would call for a change."

JAP FACTORIES TARGET OF 4TH DAY B-29 RAIDS

BULLETIN

GUAM, June 11 [Monday]—(AP)—Reconnaissance photographs show that 820 bombs burst on the Hitachi engineering works and adjacent rail marshaling yards at Sukagawa, one of five targets in yesterday's precision, high explosive raids by 250 to 300 Super Forts.

GUAM, June 11 [Monday]—(AP)—Nearly 200 Super Fortresses loosed high explosive bombs yesterday on five factory and military targets in the Tokyo and Yokohama areas, Japan's fourth straight day of pounding by B-29s, carrier planes, and army Mustangs. Tokyo admitted one of every 15 residents has been burned out of or blown from his home by air raids.

The rain of aerial blows dealt by the army and navy warplane teams ranged all the way from industrial Sukagawa, 115 miles northeast of Tokyo, to Kanoya naval air base on Kyushu, 600 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Fly Over in Two Waves

The Japanese news agency, Domei, said the bombers numbered about 300 and came over in two waves, then split into several formations. Their high explosives were showered on the Hitachi aircraft plant at Chiba, 20 miles southeast of Tokyo; the Japan aircraft Tomioka plant, five miles south of Yokohama; an army air depot, 24 miles west of Tokyo; Hitachi aircraft engineering works at Sukagawa, 115 miles northeast of Tokyo, and the Kasimagaura seaplane base on Kasimaga lake, 35 miles northeast of Tokyo.

B-29s hitting the first three of the targets were escorted by 100 Iwo Island based Mustang fighters. Tokyo radio said other B-29s mined the Kanmon strait, western entrance to Japan's inland sea.

Adm. Halsey's 3d fleet carrier planes made their third attack in eight days on southern Kyushu air fields. They destroyed 30 enemy planes at Kanoya naval air base and bombed and strafed radio installations, hangars, barracks, and a naval pilot training center.

Althe hundreds of planes participated in the raids, official United States announcements listed only 10 American aircraft lost. These were two B-29s Thursday and one Sunday, four carrier planes and three Mustangs. No Super Forts were lost Saturday, nor were there any Thunderbolt losses. All four carrier pilots were rescued; so were pilots of two of the three Mustangs.

Tell of Bases on Okinawa

San Francisco, Cal., June 10 (AP)—The Tokyo radio said today that America had massed from 700 to 800 Super Fortresses in the Marianas and had sent Liberators to Okinawa for intensified air raids against Japan.

The Japanese Domei news agency, in a broadcast said the Americans had put 10 air fields into operation on Okinawa, 325 miles south of Japan, and on Okinawa's neighboring island of Ie.

WARSHIPS AND PLANES ATTACK JAPS ON BORNEO

U. S. Troops Capture a Town in North Luzon

MANILA, June 11 [Monday]—(AP)—Allied bombers and light naval units are attacking the defenses of oil-rich Borneo, where, the Japanese say, allied units are storming the strategic island of Labaun.

For the second day since Tokyo said allied troops landed at Labaun, commanding the mouth of Brunei bay, Gen. MacArthur made no mention of ground action. But he announced that heavy, medium and fighter bombers dumped 213 tons of bombs on supply and defense areas of Brunei bay, where the Japanese fleet in southern waters used to refuel.

Heavy bombers also swept far southward, destroying three coastal freighters and bombing shipyards near Bandjermasin.

Shell Japanese Positions

Light naval units swept Borneo's northeast coast, shelling Japanese shore positions and sinking three sailing vessels off Sandakan, capital of British Borneo. The air forces turned their attention to the defenses of Balikpapan, oil center of southern Borneo, silencing three guns.

In the quickening clean-up in the Philippines, MacArthur announced that 5,911 enemy dead had been counted in the last week and 725 prisoners taken. American casualties were 172 killed, four missing and 855 wounded. This brought enemy casualties in the entire Philippines campaign to 392,116.

In northeast Luzon, Japanese forces being shoved back toward the broad Cagayan valley were split in two when the 37th infantry division captured the strategic road junction of Bagabag.

Cut Off in Mountain

All the Japanese west of the town, in the mountains northeast of Manila, were cut off in the Benguet mountains and separated from the main enemy force falling back into the valley.

After seizing Bagabag, the Americans drove on five miles eastward, where they were 12 miles from San Luis, at the mouth of the Cagayan valley.

In the southern Philippines, Yank combat patrols of the 31st infantry division knifed thru the hills in the Mindanao interior and reached Silae, northwest of Davao port, where the compressed Japanese were expected to make a stand.

The 24th infantry division, striking up from the south toward a junction with the 31st, captured Mandog and Wangan, the latter 21 miles northwest of Davao, but enemy resistance was stiff.

GEN. MacARTHUR KEEPS UP WITH 'TRAVELING' 40TH

Pays Visit to Infantry Division in Field

BY DONALD STARR
[Chicago Tribune War Correspondent]
[Representing the Combined American Press]

WITH GEN MacARTHUR IN THE FIELD [Delayed]—The "traveling" 40th infantry division, which has fought on Luzon, Panay, Mindanao, and Negros, was visited today by Gen. MacArthur.

Standing on high ground of the Lanatuan plain northeast of Bacolod, Occidental Negros, MacArthur listened to an explanation of the situation by Col. John B. Maloney of Sacramento, Cal., commander of the 185th regiment which has driven the Japs into high hills a few hundred yards ahead. The exposed position of MacArthur, who was accompanied to the front by Maj. Gen. Rapp Brush and Lt. Gen. Eichelberger, 8th army commander, was not as dangerous at it might seem. The Japs, retreating up half mile high slopes, have been unable to carry artillery and weapons with them.

At Gen. Brush's headquarters silver star medals were awarded to Pfc. William McDonald, Mount Carmel, Ill.; Pfc. Emilio Martinez, Rotan, Tex., and Sgt. William Ellison, Waco, Tex. McDonald won his medal in an April 24 action in which he knocked out a Jap machine gun in a pillbox and relieved a platoon which had been pinned down by an enemy gunner. The citation states that "without regard for his own safety," McDonald rolled to the bottom of a ravine to free himself from the line of fire, approached the gun from the rear, and tossed a grenade. After a Jap grenade narrowly missed him, he threw a second grenade and opened up with his submachine gun, killing all three occupants of the pillbox.

Evidence of the accuracy of American bombing can be seen on every hand in the coastal plain which produced enough sugar cane to make Negros the richest island agriculturally in the Philippines.

AUSSIES MAKE NEW LANDING ON BOUGAINVILLE

San Francisco, June 10 (AP)—The Melbourne radio reported today that Australians in northern Bougainville had landed on the west coast of Machin bay, posing a threat to sizable Japanese troop concentrations on the Bonis peninsula.

The broadcast said the Aussies established a beachhead and then pushed inland. An Australian army bulletin, quoted by Melbourne, said "other Australian forces are moving north along a connecting track from our lines across the base of the peninsula." Junction of this force with the Machin bay invaders "would seal off the Japanese in the southwest of the peninsula."

On southern Bougainville, Melbourne said, the Aussies captured Mamagot at the mouth of the Hari river. Entrenched Japanese forces on an escarpment overlooking the river held up an Australian advance in that sector.

CALIFORNIA PAYS NEW TRIBUTES TO WAR CHIEFS

Los Angeles, Cal., June 10 (AP)—Southern California's thunderous welcome for Generals Patton and Doolittle and 47 officers and men of their European commands, marked by an impressive ceremony witnessed by 100,000 persons last night, continued with unabated enthusiasm today.

Today an auto tour was made in surrounding cities and communities, and the route of the procession was lined with cheering throngs.

Gen. Patton said he "hoped the army would let him take Monday off" to visit old friends informally here. Gen. Doolittle will go to Seattle for an appearance Tuesday.

In the morning Gen. Patton attended services at the church in San Gabriel where he was baptized as a child.

Spaatz Goes Home

Boyertown, Pa., June 10 (AP)—Gen. Spaatz, commander of United States strategic air forces in Europe, came home today—home to "Mom," plenty of "good old Berks county sausage" and the town which he knew as a youngster. He swept his 78 year old mother, Mrs. Anna Spaatz, into his arms after rushing up the steps of her little white cottage.

More than 5,000 of the county's citizens welcomed their "greatest hero."

JAPS WRANGLE OVER PREMIER'S BID AS DICTATOR

Government Asks Full Power in Emergency

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Premier Kantaro Suzuki's request for dictatorial powers in this hour of Japan's acknowledged peril brought on "unexpectedly heated debates" in the Nippon diet and forced a one day extension of the parliament's extraordinary session, Domei agency reported yesterday.

Japanese broadcasts for home consumption indicated members of the lower house feared that by granting Suzuki the right to rule by decree they would be legislating the diet out of existence.

Domei insisted, however, in an English language broadcast, that passage of the extraordinary war measures bill "is considered in parliament quarters to be fairly certain."

While the diet, which previously has rubber-stamped anything the government asked for, wrangled, the cabinet acted to make the eight regional governments of the home islands more independent in the event of an American invasion.

Plan Individual Action

Domei announced that regional administrative councils had been abolished and replaced by a "regional superintendents general system" to permit the administrators to act with full authority should their regions be isolated by invasion.

The regions are the northern island of Hokkaido, five areas of the central island of Honshu, embracing Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya, Hiroshima, and the northern district of Tokhoku, and the two southern islands of Shikoku and Kyushu.

Tokyo radio said two members of the lower house, Takataro Sakuda, of Hiroshima, and Tadataka Ikezaki, of Osaka, wanted to know if the emergency bill meant martial law for Japan.

"Martial law," replied Gen. Korechika Anami, minister of war, "would give all power to armed forces. However, this measure will enable ministers to be independent. In an urgent case, martial law may be declared."

Tokyo said Suzuki entered the debate at one point, when it appeared members were afraid they were abolishing the parliament.

"The diet members," he assured them, "will set up a committee to give advice to the government."

Get Ready for Emergency

Minister of Justice Hiromasa Matsuzaka also spoke for the government, declaring:

"This measure is adopted to be used only in an emergency. It was drawn up because of the fear that the government may not be able to give comprehensive orders in carrying on an administration."

BURGLARS LOOT TAVERN

Joseph Norway told police yesterday that burglars took a portable radio, a revolver, six pints of whisky, and $108 from his tavern at 1015 E. 43d st.

Nose of MacArthur's New Plane

[Acme Photo]

Nose of the new C-54 Skymaster transport plane, Bataan, which has been flown to Pacific war zone to serve as "flying headquarters" for Gen. MacArthur. W. B. Maxwell, army test pilot, is at the controls.

It's Flying GHQ

Santa Monica, Cal., June 10 (AP)—A Douglas C-54 transport plane now serves as mobile headquarters for Gen. Douglas MacArthur in the Philippines operations, Douglas Aircraft company announced today.

The GHQ plane, a four engined model, classified as "Skymaster," was flown out recently by Lt. Col. W. E. [Dusty] Rhoades, personal pilot for Gen. MacArthur. It has been named "Bataan," and has a cruising speed of 200 miles per hour.

The announcement said the interior had been modified to provide desk space, eating and sleeping accommodations, to serve as a combined home office and battle station.

REPORT CHINESE REDS ENTERING SHANGHAI AREA

CHUNGKING, June 10 (AP)—A Chinese communist press dispatch reported today that communist troops were infiltrating into the area near Shanghai, major seaport of China.

The dispatch said some troops had arrived in the upper reaches of the Whangpoo river, while others penetrated to the vicinity of Soochow and Wussin on the Shanghai-Nanking railroad and into the neighborhood of Sungkiang on the Shanghai-Hangchow line. Shanghai lies at the mouth of the Whangpoo.

It is believed only a few, if any, Japanese troops are stationed in Shanghai. Most Chinese quarters here attributed the communist activity on the east coast as a desire to be in position to occupy Shanghai and other important cities once the Japanese abandon them.

PERU HAS FIRST FREE ELECTION AFTER 25 YEARS

BY C. N. GRIFFIS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LIMA, Peru, June 10—Voters in this once revolution torn country went to the polls today to elect a president, two vice presidents, and a complete congressional slate in the first free election in more than 25 years. Results will not be known until the national electoral board meets a few weeks hence.

Candidates for the highest office in the land were Dr. Jose Luis Bustamante y Rivero, 51, lawyer, diplomat, and former ambassador to Bolivia, and Gen. Eloy G. Ureta, 52, professional army officer, and leader of Peruvian forces in the Ecuadorean campaign in 1941.

Parties Join Forces

Bustamante is backed by the National Democratic front, which is regarded as liberal leftist, while Ureta is sponsored by the National Union coalition, both parties newly formed.

There were no disturbances as Peruvians lined up to vote.

In accordance with a constitutional provision, President Manuel Prado declared he would not consider reelection or extension of his present terms and pledged free elections to name his successor.

The government maintained a strictly impartial attitude thruout the electoral campaign and so-called political exiles were allowed to return.

Chaos for Several Years

Following the overthrow of the 11 year regime of President Augusto B. Leguia in August, 1930, there followed two years of chaotic revolutionary government ending with the assassination of President Gen. Sanchez Cerro on April 30, 1933. Marshal Oscar Benavides then was elected president by a constituent assembly and governed the country for six years until the inauguration of President Prado on Dec. 8, 1939.

In the last general elections members of the American Popular Revolutionary alliance [A. P. R. A.] were barred on charges of international communistic affiliations. However, A. P. R. A. and the Communist party recently were given full legal standing.

The new president takes office on July 28 for a five year term.

YANKS DOWN DEATH LOADED, CREWLESS B-29

Ghost Battle Over Iwo Saves Many Lives

7TH FIGHTER COMMAND HDQ., Iwo Island, June 10 (AP)—An American P-61 Black Widow night fighter fought and won a strange air battle against a derelict American Super Fortress which threatened this island base with disaster.

Details of the fight, which saw the P-61 pursue and down the Super Fort which was careening crewless and with a full load of bombs over this base after receiving an ack-ack hit during a raid on Osaka, were revealed by the 7th fighter command today.

Thousands of men on Iwo watched the Black Widow go after the B-29. Had the big bomber eluded the fighter and crashed on Iwo, some of the men surely would have lost their lives, a headquarters spokesman said.

Over Osaka the B-29 took a direct flak hit just as it was ready to release its bombs. The shell tore a three foot hole thru the pilot's compartment, killing the plane's commander. Bomb bay doors were jammed shut and could not be opened again.

Staggers Toward Iwo

A stunned and bleeding co-pilot faced the terrific job of flying a hopelessly crippled plane back to a friendly base.

Left far behind by other planes in the formation, and with all radio equipment useless, the Super Fort staggered along toward Iwo.

It was still miles from its goal when the Black Widow on routine patrol sighted the bomber and saw that it was in trouble. In the fighter plane, Lt. Arthur C. Shepherd of Seattle, Wash., and Lt. Arvid Shulenburger of Washington, S. D., quickly sent a radio warning to other aircraft to beware of the damaged bomber, and then undertook to lead the sky giant to Iwo.

Flying close to the B-29 the Black Widow crew could see that the big ship was too badly damaged to attempt a landing and that the crew was preparing to bail out.

All Leap to Safety

Finally over Iwo the co-pilot ordered the crew to "hit the silk." Eight crewmen leaped on the first run over the island. Then the co-pilot swung back, set the automatic pilot and he and the remaining crewmen jumped to safety.

Empty except for its bomb load and the body of its commander, the big plane started its wild "ghost" ride, pursued by the Black Widow, intent on shooting it down over the water.

"As soon as we cleared the island we started shooting with all eight guns," said Lieut. Shepherd. "Our first bursts went into the left outside engine which began to smoke and then flame.

"But the bomber continued to fly. The loss of an engine swung it in another orbit back toward Iwo. We held our fire until it had swung clear of the island again. Then we gave it everything we had."

Tear Chunks Out of B-29

The Black Widow poured 456 rounds of 50 caliber machine gun fire and 320 rounds of 20 mm. cannon shells into the staggering Super Fort.

"We could see the bullets stitching the left wing from tip to fuselage," Shepherd added. "Then fire raced back to the tail. The 50s made neat small holes and the 20s tore chunks out of the plane as they went thru.

"We were flying close enough to see where practically every round was hitting, and wondered how long the big bomber could keep taking it. Finally, just as it began to seem as if the plane would keep flying forever, it headed downward and plunged into the sea."

G I Joe in the Pacific

By ARTHUR VEYSEY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE 43D DIVISION ON LUZON, June 10—These are some of the heroes of Luzon:

Five pillboxes filled with Japs atop a ridge stopped an American rifle company. Artillery knocked out four but the fifth still kept the infantry in holes. Pvt. Joe Dutchover of Hagerman, N. M., and four others began crawling up the slope toward it. One by one the Japs felled four of the five. Alone, Dutchover crept forward. From five or six feet he tossed a grenade into the pillbox, then jumped to his feet and charged, his tommy gun dealing death to every defender.

The army's comment:

Neutralization of this position undoubtedly saved many casualties.

Sgt. Jerry Bernas, 1830 Wisconsin av., Berwyn, Ill., drove his self-propelled gun smack up to caves and pillboxes, taking full advantage of armor against small arms fire. But one day he came suddenly upon a Jap 105 mm. gun. The Jap crew was loading it. From that range the first shot would be a sure hit and wipe out Bernas' gun and crew. But Bernas was ready and fired first.

The army's comment:

His vigorous leadership imbued in his men the confidence to follow him.

An infantryman crawling thru Jap barbed wire was hit. His body was caught on the wires. Sgt. Frederick Breen of Barre, Vt., ran to him. One bullet pierced Breen's canteen. Another hit the buckle of his cartridge belt. But he reached his buddy, cut the wires, and pulled him to safety only to learn he was dead.

The army's comment:

Placing the life of a comrade above his own exemplifies the highest standards of military service.

Somewhere on a ridge were Japs in hiding. From below it was impossible to spot them. A platoon was assigned the job to dig them out with bayonets. Being its commander, Lt. Charles Weldt Jr., 3612 S. Wood st., Chicago, went first. They found the Japs and, in army parlance, eliminated the strong point.

The army's comment:

His courage reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Near the village of Lamban was a bridge spanning a river too deep to ford. Seizing the bridge intact was important. Eight men and five officers were assigned the job. As scout, Corp. Clarence McLeod of Oldtown, Me., came first upon the bridge. The guards there tried to stop him. But disregarding their rifle bullets he returned their fire, killed one Jap and caused the others to try to flee. The rest of the patrol cut them down. So furious was McLeod's attack the Japs didn't set off the demolition charges.

The army's comment:

His act of heroism contributed immensely to saving the bridge.

Eight Japs in a sudden attack overpowered men in two foxholes. Without waiting for orders, Pvt. Tot Johnson of Redlands, Cal., and Pvt. Joe Kewly of Seattle, Wash., counter-attacked. They killed all eight and captured two machine guns.

The army's comment:

Due to their voluntary action the battalion was able to reorganize its perimeter and evacuate the wounded.

CHINESE BREAK INTO FORMER U. S. AIR BASE FORTS

CHUNGKING, June 11 [Monday]—(AP)—Strong Chinese assault forces, in sudden thrusts which collapsed Japanese resistance, broke thru the outer defenses of the former United States air base city of Liuchow last night after capturing the South China rail hub's outlying bastion of Ishan, a Chinese bulletin said today.

The Chinese high command, in a special announcement, said Chinese troops captured Ishan, 43 miles west of Liuchow, last night. At the same time shock units infiltrated "thru the outer defenses of Liuchow and are engaging the enemy," the Chinese added.

Chinese headquarters reported that its troops had captured the port of Futing on China's vulnerable east coast 450 miles west of Okinawa in the second of four important victories, paving the way for any possible American invasion of the Asiatic mainland.

By the capture of Futing, the Chinese cleared all coastal Fukien province with the exception of a pocket around the port of Amoy, 140 miles west of Formosa.

In two other successes, Chinese forces seized the highway stronghold of Lungchow, 12 miles from Indo-China, from Japanese troops retiring from South China, and smashed within 25 miles of the former United States air base at Kweilin, 350 miles southeast of Chungking.

A Chinese bulletin disclosed that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's veteran fighters were within 14 miles of splitting the Japanese rail corridor linking Kweilin with Liuchow, 90 miles southwest.

Meanwhile the Chinese high command said that Chinese regulars, supported by local militia, Friday captured Lungchow at the south end of the enemy's shattered overland corridor that once ran from Korea to Indo-China and Singapore.

Enemy remnants were retreating 12 miles southward toward Pingsiang, last Chinese highway town before the Japanese occupied French colony, and 90 miles northeast of Hanoi, the Indo-Chinese capital.

Breach Jap Corridor

The Chinese have torn a 200 mile breach in Japan's land bridge to southeast Asia. The gap extends from Lungchow northeast to Tatang, 21 miles southeast of Liuchow, the largest communications center in Kwangsi province.

The Japanese meanwhile were taking measures apparently designed to strengthen their north-south corridor across China from Hankow to Canton and build up a strong wall that would prevent Chinese troops from smashing eastward to support any sea borne invasion of the Chinese mainland.

Strengthening their positions on the east flank of this corridor, Japanese columns which struck eastward from Kukong on the Canton-Hankow railroad crossed the Kwangtung-Kiangsi border into Kiangsi and reached a point 15 miles south of Kiennan. Kiennan is 160 miles north of Hong Kong.

Thruout China, close support was given to Chinese ground forces by American and Chinese airmen.

1,000 Big Bombers Flown Back to U.S. from England

LONDON, June 10 (AP)—One thousand heavy bombers and 17,490 airmen of the 8th air force have been flown to the United States from the United Kingdom since redeployment began May 20, Brig. Gen. Earl S. Hoag, the air transport command's European division commander, said today.

AGREE SECURITY OF U. S. RESTS ON ISLAND NETWORK

For future peace and security, the United States must maintain a network of naval and air bases on Pacific islands, authorities on international relations agreed yesterday on the Northwestern University Reviewing Stand broadcast over W-G-N and the Mutual network.

Walter Fisher, president of the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations, said that for most of the islands a single trustee would be best to get the advantage of undivided responsibility at a time in world history when people do not coöperate too well.

Rollin Posey, dean of the university college, Northwestern university, said the United States must move toward two goals in the Pacific after victory over Japan.

"These are security for our own country, no matter what the future will bring, and a disposition of the islands which will make for peace instead of tending to breed another war," he said.

He opposed the mandate system as "unsatisfactory and inadequate" and asserted administrative power should not be vested in single nations.

REDS IN BERLIN LET ANTI-NAZIS FORM PARTIES

Also Permit Supervised Trade Unions

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

The Berlin radio broadcast on Sunday an order by Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov permitting Germans to organize, under soviet guidance, anti-Nazi political parties and trade unions in Russian occupied Germany.

Zhukov, head of the soviet military administration in Russian occupied Germany, declared that self-administration organs set up in the occupied zone had created "conditions for free social and political activities of the German population."

The order, recorded by the FCC, said the Russians will permit "unhampered activities of anti-fascist parties which aim at the final extermination of the Hitlerite regime and the creation of a basis of democracy and civil liberties in Germany, and development of independent activities of the anti-Nazi population in every respect."

Must Publish Activities

The order declared that the trade unions, organizations, and societies "are to be granted the right of concluding collective agreements with employers, as well as to create friendly societies and other institutions for mutual assistance, as well as schools and other educational institutions.

"All anti-fascist organizations and all trade unions will be required to publish a program of their activities and should also submit a list of their executive bodies."

An Associated Press Dispatch from Berlin quoted Col. Gen. Nikolai Bezarin, Russian commandant of Berlin, as saying that the Communist party as such is not functioning among the Germans there.

HARD WINTER AHEAD

BY EDDY GILMORE

BERLIN, June 10 (AP)—Just now Berlin's 3,000,000 are well fed, but the Russians are warning them that there is a hard winter ahead, when food will be low and the people may be cold.

Col. Gen. Nikolai E. Bezarin, commandant for the city, was killing Germans May 2 and feeding them May 3. When the Russians took over here they found a desperate people — eating horses, dogs, and cats, trying to make drinks out of grass.

Now, Bezarin says, the population appears to be satisfied with the food situation. But he is warning them to help themselves to avert suffering next winter.

Food Prices Fixed

Food prices are low, fixed by the Russians. Rations have been divided into four categories for adults, varying with the type of work performed, and one for children.

In order to buy their food Berliners must work as they have never worked before, says Russian-appointed Arthur Werner, a German educator. He asserts the average Berlin worker is receiving about 150 marks [$15 at the United States military exchange rate] every four weeks, and if he is careful he can purchase his rationed food for about five marks [50 cents] weekly.

The bread ration varies. It is 600 grams [about 21 ounces] for those doing heavy work and in top flight white collar jobs, and half that amount for housewives. Meat varies from 100 grams [about 3.5 ounces] for heavy workers to 20 grams [about 7-10 of an ounce] for housewives.

Peasants Bring Supplies

Other items on the daily ration list include potatoes, barley, fats, and sugar. On the monthly list are ersatz coffee, real coffee, tea, and salt. The largest ration of real coffee is 100 grams and the smallest 35 grams.

Milk and dairy products supplement the rations for children.

In addition, German peasants are permitted to bring surplus food into Berlin and sell it at a higher rate than the fixed prices. Right now there seems to be a large supply of rhubarb, and people are transporting it in big baskets, baby carriages, and little wagons.

Some restaurants are open, and others plan to resume business shortly. No alcoholic drinks are being sold in quantity, but beer is expected in a fair sized volume soon.

I have talked to dozens of Berliners with no Russians within sight. They say they would like more fats and more meats, of course, but add that they are getting along.

"Starvation was prevented by our immediately hurrying in foods from outlying districts, from across Germany's borders, and even from the soviet union itself," the commandant said.

Not Going to Starve

Werner observed:

"When Berlin capitulated the Russians brought in bread, meat, and flour, for the Nazis took almost everything—took it or destroyed it. They said to the German people, 'You had food when we were here. You will starve when we're gone.'

"I believe I express the feeling of most all the people when I say they are now as content as a defeated people can be. At least they know they are not going to starve."

The Russians are employing in the food ration program minor functionaries who worked for the Nazis, "but we are keeping a close eye on them," Bezarin said.

Of the Germans in general, Bezarin added:

"Every German at heart remains a German, and many of them are close to Hitler. His cohorts are not deceiving us with their protestations of collaboration. The sincerity of the Nazis is not worth a broken coin."

In other branches of public life the Red army is doing a herculean job in directing the repair of Berlin. Approximately 27,000 buildings and houses are now receiving electricity and by June 20 most of the city will have water, Bezarin predicts.

Cabarets Springing Up

Two newspapers are functioning—one published by the Red army in Germany and the other by the Germans under Red army supervision.

At present 200 movie houses are being operated and the Berlin theater of opera and ballet is planning to open soon, near its old site. The opera orchestra has already given six radio concerts. Cabarets are springing up everywhere.

Werner said the Russians were encouraging the opening of churches.

Reopening of schools presents a difficult problem because all the text books are based on nazi propaganda and must be supplanted by new ones. Despite this, the Germans are hopeful of getting schools to function in the near future.

THIEVES LOOT APARTMENT

James Norway, 1015 E. 43d st., told police that burglars broke into his apartment yesterday and stole $100, a radio, a revolver, and six pints of whisky.

Honor Film Star

IRENE DUNNE

Irene Dunne, who forsook teaching music for the stage and movies, will receive an honorary degree of doctor of music at the 78th annual commencement exercises of the Chicago Musical college in Orchestra hall Thursday. Dr. Rudolph Ganz, college president, said she is the first film actress to be so honored. Miss Dunne was graduated from the college and won a gold medal for voice excellence. In New York after her graduation, Miss Dunne appeared on the stage but wanted to teach music. The late Florenz Ziegfeld Jr. made her a star in Jerome Kern's "Show Boat" after meeting her in an elevator, and she bypassed the teaching career.

PEACE IF ALLIES HAVE TO FIGHT FOR IT, IKE SAYS honors, all the publicity, everything else this war has brought to him, if he could have avoided the misery, the suffering, and the debt that have been brought to the populations by reason of this war.

"Yet this was a holy war. More than any other war in history this war has been an array of the forces of evil against those of righteousness. It had to have its leaders and it had to be won—but no matter what the sacrifice, no matter what the suffering of populations, no matter what the cost, the war had to be won.

"To no one man do the united nations owe a greater debt than to Marshal Zhukov. As our honored guest he has come down and very courteously conferred certain honors of the soviet union upon members of the allied forces.

"But Marshal Zhukov, being a modest man, probably underrates the standing that he holds in our hearts and minds.

"One day, when all of us here at this board are gathered to our fathers, there is certain to be another order of the soviet union.

"It will be the order of Zhukov and that order will be prized by every man who admires courage, vision, foresight, and determination in a soldier.

"Gentlemen, I deem it a very great honor to ask you to rise and drink to Marshal Zhukov."

Eisenhower's speech was made at a luncheon in his headquarters which honored Zhukov, Field Marshal Montgomery, who also received the order of victory, and nearly 60 high ranking military figures from the United States, Russia, and Britain.

Zhukov, toasting Eisenhower, described him as a son of the American people and said he belonged with the immortal great of all time for welding the victorious allied armies of the west out of so many different peoples.

Spends 5 Hours in Frankfurt

Zhukov spent five hours in Frankfurt. Gen. De Tassigny, French representative on the allied control council for Germany, was not here, and Lt. Gen. W. B. Smith, Eisenhower's chief of staff, said the meeting had nothing to do with the council's proceedings. Nevertheless it was learned that many minor matters relating to the administration of defeated Germany were discussed by Eisenhower and Zhukov.

No further meetings of the four power council are expected until Eisenhower returns from his visit to the United States, likely to last 30 days.

An authoritative source said the withdrawal of American troops from the territory now included in the Russian zone of occupied Germany would begin in a few weeks. Russian troops will take over the vacated territory, and the Americans and British then likely will be invited to Berlin, which is to be under joint control.

Mass of Precious Gems

The Russian order of victory never before had been presented to any except Russians, and only seven previously had been awarded. Eisenhower's was number eight and Montgomery's number nine. The medal is a glittering mass of rubies and diamonds and is said to be worth a minimum of $12,000.

The Russian party of 22 arrived at 11:05 a. m. in two C-47s. Both Montgomery and Zhukov were greeted officially by Smith.

Montgomery and Zhukov took salutes from special forces that included two battalions from the 29th American infantry division and one company from the 2d battalion of the 156th infantry regiment. The 2d battalion is commanded by Lt. Col. Baldwin B. Smith of Chicago.

Sgt. Jack Lake, Cicero, Ill., carried the Russian flag as a special color guard marched in a grand review.

Three members of a Negro U. S. O. singing unit from Chicago were applauded enthusiastically by Eisenhower, Zhukov and Montgomery during the luncheon. They were Ollie Crawford, 3803 South Parkway, Leonard Carton, 4008 S. State st., and Alfred Elkins, 3234 St. Lawrence st.

REDS STUDYING DEMOBILIZATION PLANS: ZHUKOV

Reveals How He Won Battle for Berlin

BY EDDY GILMORE

BERLIN, June 9 [Delayed]—(AP)—Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov said today that soviet Russia is studying the question of demobilizing her mighty army, and at the same time disclosed his own story of the night attack which won the battle for Berlin.

Marshal Georgi Zhukov

"The war in Europe is ended," the assistant commander-in-chief of the Red army told correspondents here from Moscow. "We are now studying the question of demobilization."

This statement was in response to a question "is the Red army being demobilized?" Zhukov did not comment beyond the answer quoted.

Zhukov said also:

1. Soviet Russia wants German war criminals tried at once, preferably in public.

2. The soviets feel it would be useful to have foreign correspondents in Berlin.

The marshal said a novel night attack by 4,000 soviet tanks and nearly 5,000 airplanes, striking in the white glare of massed searchlights, broke nazi defenses along the Oder river and delivered Berlin to the Red army.

Battle Won on Oder

"The suddenness of our blow was overwhelming," the marshal said. His statement, telling of what probably was the greatest night battle in history, was the first detailed account of how the Red army broke thru 500,000 nazi defenders and took Berlin last April.

Zhukov commanded the attack on the nazi capital, and he said he considers the battle of Berlin actually was won on the Oder river line and not in the city, for it was in the German defenses in depth along the Oder that the Nazis were really beaten.

"Since we knew this would be the decisive battle of the war," he said, "we made thoro preparations for it. We brought up enough men and material to assure the outcome. We concentrated so much technical equipment we were able to break the German defense in the shortest time possible and seize Berlin.

Introduced Surprise

"The Germans were expecting a heavy blow. We knew this, so we had to introduce some element of surprise. To make sure of this, I, as commander of the attack, ordered an attack along the entire front at night. The Germans were not looking for this.

"The Germans expected a night attack," explained Zhukov, "but they did not think the entire weight of the offensive would come after dark."

The marshal then gave for the first time the story of the Russians' attack, with tanks and troops and planes moving ahead at night and powerful searchlights showing the way and blinding the enemy.

"We launched this tank attack on the night of April 15-16 after terrific artillery and mortar preparation. We threw 4,000 tanks into the German lines supported by searchlights and by 22,000 guns and mortars and 4,000 to 5,000 planes. Our planes made 15,000 sorties within a 24 hour period," he said.

Nothing Like Moscow

Asked how Berlin's defenses compared with those of Moscow, Marshal Zhukov, known as the defender of the capital, replied:

"No comparison. The Germans were beaten on the Oder. That's where they met their end. That's where the real battle took place. While with us, the battle only began at the gates of Moscow.

"Moscow's defense was good and strong and the morale high. So we were able to switch to the offensive, which was part of our plan."

"We broke their resistance quickly and moved in. Seeing that this outer defense of Berlin had crumbled, the Germans sent out every kind of reserve from the city itself. The reserves were routed as fast as they came up by planes and tanks. So by the time we reached Berlin its defense was bared.

"Their anti-aircraft had received a hard blow and because of this our planes were able to operate at low levels.

"More than 500,000 Germans participated in this battle of Berlin. Three hundred thousand were taken prisoner. One hundred and fifty thousand were killed. The rest just ran away. We learned an important lesson in the Berlin battle—particularly on night operations."

As a commander who had fought both the Japanese and the Germans, Zhukov was asked to compare the two.

"The German was very well equipped technically, and well versed in handling his arms," Zhukov replied. "The Japs, at the time I fought them, did not have this technical equipment, but the Jap soldier is stubborn and fights with tenacity."

GERMANS MUST LEARN LESSON, MONTY WARNS

21ST ARMY GROUP HDQ., Germany, June 10 (AP)—Field Marshal Montgomery held out hope to the Germans tonight that the policy of non-fraternization can be modified when the last vestiges of nazilism have been wiped out, but said it must continue for the present to bring home to the Germans their war guilt and to avert the danger of a third world war.

Field Marshal Montgomery

The commander of the British zone of occupation in the reich, in a message over the Hamburg radio, said the nonfraternization was being enforced to teach "an ultimate and final lesson."

In simple, forthright language, the British commander said:

"Probably you have wondered why our soldiers have not been more friendly with you, and ignore you when you say good morning on the street, and why they do not play with your children.

Order a Necessity

"Our soldiers act according to orders given them.

"You do not like this attitude. Our soldiers do not like it, either.

"We are naturally friendly, easy-going people, but the order was a necessity, and I tell you why.

"In the first World war, begun by Germany, your wehrmacht was beaten in the field. Your generals surrendered and in the peace treaty of Versailles your leaders admitted Germany bore the guilt for that war.

"The capitulation took place in France, and the military operations did not take place on German soil. Your cities never were destroyed as were those in France and Belgium. Your armies marched home in good order.

Spread Fairy Tale

"At home your leaders spread the fairy tale that your army had never been defeated. Later on they refused to keep the peace treaty.

"They assured you Germany bore no guilt, nor had been defeated. Since you never experienced war at home, many of you believed this.

"Once your leaders again propagated war, you acclaimed them. And once again after years of destruction and misery your armies have been beaten. This time the allies are determined to teach you an ultimate and final lesson.

"Not only by the fact you had been beaten—that you will have found out—but to bring home to you that you are guilty of this new aggression. If this is not made clear to you and your children you might again throw us into a third world war.

"During the war your leaders hid from you the picture of Germany obvious to every one beyond Germany.

Too Much Has Happened

"Many of you seem to have believed that as soon as the war was over you could again be friendly with our soldiers as if nothing had happened.

"Too much has happened, however.

"Our soldiers have seen how many friends were shot, how many women and children were starved. They have seen terrible things in countries where your leaders have waged war. You think you are not responsible for these things.

"However, it is the German people who brought forth these leaders. As long as your leaders were successful you were jubilant, you laughed.

"These are our orders and this has been done to preserve your children and the entire world from another such war.

"It will not be so forever.

"We are Christian people, ready to forgive, and we easily laugh and are ready to be friendly.

"It is our aim to destroy completely the national socialist system.

"It is too early to be sure of having achieved this aim.

"If your children are old enough you must read it [this message] to them and you should look to it that they understand it. Explain to them why it is that the English soldiers ignore them."

CHICAGOAN IN LONDON TO DIRECT DISPOSAL OF WAR MATERIALS

LONDON, June 10 (AP)—James S. Knowlson, former member of the United States war production board, has arrived here to direct the job of disposing of surplus army and navy supplies in the European theater, United Kingdom base headquarters said today.

"Before any article can be designated as surplus it must be certified by army and navy officials in Washington that it is nonessential in any of the other 16 theaters of operations," headquarters said, adding that "reciprocal aid surpluses held by American forces will be offered back to the British government."

Knowlson, chairman of Stewart Warner corporation, Chicago, was accompanied by Conrad M. Matthiessen, Pasadena, Cal., his deputy, and Brig. Gen. William R. Gruber.

LITTLE NATIONS IN LAST STAND AGAINST VETO

Australia Leads Fight on Big 5 Plan

morrow. Dr. Evatt indicated his fear, however, it was a losing fight.

Another clash between embattled forces will take place tomorrow in the trusteeship committee when Brig. Gen. Romulo, Philippines resident commissioner to the United States, will renew his fight for a pledge of independence for all colonial peoples. As the trusteeship draft now stands the hope of independence is held out to territories committed to a trusteeship of the new league of nations but not to India, Burma, Malaya, Indo-China, the East Indies and other dependent peoples of the colonial powers, Great Britain, France and the Netherlands. Romulo demands their inclusion in the guarantees.

Confused, Evatt Charges

In the meeting last night Dr. Evatt said that under the Big Four interpretation to which Russia now agreed the security council "can only discuss whether a dispute can be discussed and can only investigate whether it should be investigated."

"The matter," he went on, "stands at present in so confused a condition that, if the present text of the voting procedure stands without amendment, steps should be taken to secure the opinion of the international court of justice on the question of interpretation involved.

"But the simpler, and preferable, course is to make sure by amendment that the veto is clearly inapplicable to any decision of the security council under the section dealing with the peaceful adjustment of disputes.

Emphasizes Importance

"The matter of the veto assumes greater importance because of the fact that, under the present draft, each of the five great powers could block any amendment of the charter."

Sen. Connally argued that the construction of the voting procedure, including the veto, by the Big Five is "essential to the strength and success of the organization."

"Altho some members of the committee might ask for more specific answers," he said, "it would be impossible to give a precise interpretation which would foresee all contingencies that might arise in the future. Each individual delegate has to make up his own mind as to the interpretation, when he casts his vote according to his own judgment and upon the basis of the best available information. It was not possible to arrive at a universally acceptable interpretation of any phrase or document.

Not Grasping or Greedy

"The great powers have the major responsibility for the maintenance of peace, but it is a responsibility they have not sought, and they have no aggressive aims. The United States is not grasping or greedy. At the end of the last war, the United States had gained no territory or reparations or a single new citizen at the point of the sword."

No less interesting than the battle of the veto is the inside story of the origin of the veto, which THE TRIBUNE has gathered from authoritative sources in the last few days. Lips sealed for a year by diplomatic exigencies were unsealed to reveal the facts.

Originated by United States

The commonly accepted version at the time of the Dumbarton Oaks conference in Washington last summer was that the veto originated with Russia and was opposed by the United States and Great Britain. Whether or not this version was inspired by the Roosevelt administration it was willing to permit it to go uncorrected for a number of reasons, including that of political expediency, for the country was just entering upon the Presidential election canvass in which the collective security issue loomed large.

The fact is that the veto originated not with Russia but with the United States, with former State Secretary Hull and the other internationalists who developed the Dumbarton Oaks Peace league project. It was conceived as a provision that would get the peace league by the United States senate without mishap.

The internationalists feared the nationalists would be able to muster the one-third plus one vote of the senate which would defeat ratification of the peace league charter unless it should contain an escape clause safeguarding American sovereignty. The veto was the escape clause, thought up by Leo Pasvolsky, the Russian born internationalist who fathered Dumbarton Oaks.

All thru the spring of 1944 Russia was extremely coy toward the peace league. Stalin had got the green light from Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill at Teheran to grab half of Poland and proceed with his program of sovietizing the remainder of eastern Europe and he was busy building a barrier of puppet states as Russia's first line of defense. He put no great faith in collective security and was fearful of getting into a league that could interfere with the soviet imperialism.

When invited to make a peace league proposal Stalin found excuses not to do so. The United States and Great Britain exchanged proposals and out of courtesy sent copies to Stalin. There in the American proposal Stalin found the provision that a decision to employ force against a nation accused of aggression could be vetoed by any one of the five big powers which would be permanent members of the league's security council. If one of the Big Five were the accused it could prevent the international police force being called out against itself.

Stalin could scarcely believe his eyes after hearing all the internationalist planning of an international police force that was to be swung against an aggressor without fear or favor. He saw possibilities in the veto and at once took an interest in the project.

With such a veto Stalin could prevent the league from interfering with his aggressions upon Poland and other countries which were receiving the blessings of communism in the wake of the Red armies thru a systematic execution and deportation of all persons resisting confiscation of their property and sovietization of their government.

The Yalta Compromise

The Americans and British were unwilling to apply the veto to all action, so an agreement was reached on voting procedure at Dumbarton Oaks. At Yalta, however, Mr. Roosevelt came up with what he called a compromise. It had been evolved by Pasvolsky and that astute international lawyer, John Foster Dulles, whom Gov. Dewey set to collaborating with Mr. Hull during the 1944 election campaign. The compromise provided that any one of the Big Five could veto any action but in the case of peaceful settlements would not have a vote and consequently a veto if a party to the dispute.

This was only a slight modification of the veto Stalin wanted, and he accepted it. He would be able to protect any Russian satellite country from interference by the league in a dispute to which Russia was not a party.

This is our latest for people who insist on throwing their clothes on the furniture!

ANTI-CATHOLIC IDEOLOGIES MUST BE FOUGHT: POPE

ROME, June 10 (AP)—Pope Pius XII., addressing more than 6,000 members of youth groups of the Rome Catholic Action in a special audience today at the Vatican, urged them to combat any social or political doctrines which are contrary to church teachings. He said some modern governmental ideologies tend to substitute their faith for that of the church and declared Catholics cannot compromise on any doctrine "be it social or political."

The pope was acclaimed as he entered the hall of benedictions thru an aisle flanked by Catholic Action members, Boy Scouts and Swiss guards. He declared Catholicism needs "strong faith and abiding men at the present moment when action above all is necessary"

He also denounced the morals of Rome, saying there are two Romes, "one Christian, the other pagan," the latter feeding on immoral shows, books, magazines and films.

YUGOSLAV ARMY BEGINS TREK OUT OF TRIESTE AREA

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

TRIESTE, Italy, June 10—Thousands of Yugoslav troops on trucks and afoot were leaving the Trieste and Gorizia region today as the terms of the Anglo-American agreement with Marshal Tito went into effect. It was the beginning of a full scale Yugoslav withdrawal eastward and according to reports it must be concluded by 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Red flags waved from some of the trucks but there was no shouting or demonstration by Tito's men. The British furnished some transport to facilitate the Yugoslavs' departure and also were on guard to prevent exuberant Italians from starting fights with the Yugoslavs.

The British were investigating complaints that some of Tito's soldiers looted personal effects from an Italian's home and equipment from a military hospital and schools.

AMG to Take Over

The allied military government organization will not move into Trieste until the Yugoslav retirement is completed. Then AMG will begin the tasks of administration and of feeding the population.

The British are preparing to take over the port of Trieste. After the German laid mines are removed from the dock and harbor sections the Yugoslavs have been patroling, Trieste again will become the hub of the sea and land supply route to Austria.

The Triestinos were showing cordiality and desire to fraternize with the Yanks and Tommies and asserted they had wanted to do so since our arrival but had to restrain themselves because of the presence of large numbers of Tito's men.

Confer on Boundary

TRIESTE, June 10 (AP)—A conference between Field Marshal Alexander, allied Mediterranean commander, and Marshal Tito was awaited here to reach final agreement on the boundary line which will separate Yugoslav and western allied occupation areas in the disputed Venezia Giulia area.

The Yugoslav political administration, in one of its last acts following the agreement by which Tito's forces agreed to withdraw eastward, announced confiscation of the equipment of Stefani, former Italian news agency, charged with fascist connections.

[Italian Foreign Minister Alcide de Gasperi said yesterday at Rome that Italy is apprehensive about the Venezia Giulia agreement, and indicated he felt that Russia influenced Britain and the United States to compromise with Yugoslavia on the question.]

Treated Unjustly: Tito

LONDON, June 10 [Reuters]—Marshal Tito complained that Yugoslavia had been treated unjustly when he addressed the Yugoslav parliament today on the ratification of the Soviet-Yugoslav treaty of friendship. He said:

"The denying of our rights tempered the joy of our peoples during the first days of our great victory over the enemy. Such injustices root themselves deeply in the soul of our peoples and are forgotten with difficulty."

JAPS TAUGHT NEW TRICKS BY OLDEST SUBS

3 Prize Cruisers on List of World War I. Vets

A U. S. NAVAL BASE, January, 1943 [Delayed] —(AP)— A group of Uncle Sam's oldest submarines — World War I. type—have just come in from administering the Japanese one of their worst drubbings of World War II.

These combat battered, 20 year old pig boats were generally regarded as too antiquated for anything but coastal duty, but they put in 35,000 miles of far ranging duty in the Southwest Pacific, sinking three Jap heavy cruisers, one destroyer, and two merchantmen, and suffering no losses themselves.

These small subs sank a cruiser carrying aid to the battered Japanese on New Guinea. They sank one merchantman and then another one, filled with supplies, right in the middle of a Jap held harbor. Then, after the marines moved in, they blasted three Jap warships attempting to carry reënforcements to the Japs in the Solomon campaigns.

Kept Japs' Nerves Frazzled

They also damaged—and possibly sank—another enemy heavy cruiser and another destroyer. They kept Jap nerves and Jap supply lines in the New Guinea-Solomons area constantly frazzled for almost a year. The cruisers were among the Japs' best and largest.

This submarine group was under command of Comdr. E. E. Yeomans of Linton, Ind., and wrote a glowing page of naval history that is well in keeping with the later pages written by the marines on Guadalcanal, Tulagi, Florida, and the rest of the Solomons.

Already a grateful government has awarded two navy crosses and two silver star medals to commanding officers. As Comdr. Yeomans puts it, the decorations are "an honor to all of their crews as well."

One of the subs, accounted for an enemy ship each time it went out on patrol.

Lt. Comdr. J. R. Moore of Knoxville, Tenn., was the skipper on the first patrols and received the navy cross for the record compiled by the old sub in sinking two merchantmen, and a heavy cruiser.

Setup Made to Order

Lt. R. T. Whitaker of Memphis, Tenn., the next commander, received the silver star after the craft sank a destroyer. Now Lt. Comdr. F. E. Brown of Reno, Nev., is the skipper.

Brown invited war correspondents aboard to get eye witness accounts of the action. The first score came with Moore in charge. A merchantman was picked off with two torpedoes as it was coming down from Rabaul.

A little more than a month later, Moore and his men painted another litle Jap cargo flag on the sub's conning tower — the symbol for sinking a merchantman.

In August the sub ran into a cruiser task-force, apparently an advance spearhead for a convoy of Jap reënforcements for Guadalcanal.

The set-up on the cruiser attack had been made to order. Lt. Roderick Fox of Milwaukee, Wis., the fourth officer, said "I didn't have to move the periscope an inch — the cruisers were right there in the sights."

While the sub was running up its heavy toll, other subs in the group were getting in their licks.

One sank a heavy cruiser. Later it damaged and possibly sank a destroyer.

Another sank a heavy cruiser. Then, with Lt. F. E. Hayler of Muncie, Ind., in command, it damaged a cruiser.

Other submarines of the group have had commanders including Lt. Comdr. E. R. Hannon, Chicago; Lt. Comdr. H. D. Sturr, Sturgis, Mich., and Lt. E. R. Crawford, Peru, Ind.

Putnam and Bride

[Associated Press Wirephoto]

Maj. George Palmer Putnam and bride after wedding yesterday.

San Marino, Cal., June 10 (AP)—Maj. George Palmer Putnam, 57, former publisher and husband of Aviatrix Amelia Earhart when she disappeared during a Pacific ocean flight in 1937, today married Margaret Haviland, 36, of Michigan City, Ind.

The ceremony was conducted by Capt. Willard Learned, army air forces chaplain, in the garden of a friend, Dr. Alice McConaughy.

It was Putnam's fourth marriage, the bride's first. After Miss Earhart, his second wife, was declared legally dead, Putnam married Mrs. Jean Marie Consigny James on May 21, 1939. They were divorced Feb. 15, 1944.

Maj. Putnam met his bride at Salina, Kas., where she was a U. S. O. executive.

ONE NAZI U-BOAT SUNK EVERY 3D DAY DURING WAR

Washington, D. C., June 10 (AP)—Germany lost an average of one submarine by sinking every three days between Sept. 3, 1939, and May 8, 1945, official records disclosed today.

A total of 713 U-boats was sunk during the war by United States, British, and allied forces during that period of roughly 68 months.

A joint announcement by the United States navy and the British admiralty credited 151 sinkings to United States forces and other allied forces, except those of the British empire, under United States control and 462 to British empire and other forces.

100 Others Destroyed

In addition, at least 100 are known to have been destroyed by mines and other causes.

The announcement explained that in the destruction of some of the German U-boats combined United States, British, or allied forces received joint credit and shore based and carrier borne air forces coöperated.

The final tabulation covered all German U-boats sunk in all waters.

The U-505, captured intact by United States forces last year, was not included in the total.

The announcement also identified as the Herring the submarine credited with the only sinking by a United States submarine of an enemy U-boat. British and British controled forces sank 25 U-boats in sub versus sub actions.

U. S. Submarine Challenged

Sinking of Italian or other axis submarines were not included in the total.

The announcement said the Herring, while on patrol in the Bay of Biscay, was challenged by an unseen vessel. Her skipper, Comdr. John Corbus, Hollywood, Cal., began a search for the challenger.

"Comdr. Corbus thought he might be closing on German blockade runner," the report said. "Finally, however, he identified the other vessel as a U-boat, slithering along on the surface. At close range the Herring fired two torpedoes, both of which hit, and Comdr. Corbus and his crew got credit for the only nazi U-boat sunk by an American submarine."

Behead 3 German Soldiers for Concealing Weapons

TWENTY-FIRST ARMY GROUP HDQ., June 10 (AP)—Three German soldiers have been decapitated for concealing pistols after they had been disarmed under terms of surrender, it was announced tonight. Field Marshal Montgomery signed the death warrants. The executioner, Friederich Hehr of Hannover, has been an official German executioner since 1912 and will serve in that capacity in the British occupied area of Germany.

Mr. Henry C. Lytton
The Hub, Henry C. Lytton & Co.
Chicago 4, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Lytton:

Today on this little "rock" in the Pacific, we received our May 14th issue of Time Magazine containing the most interesting article, "Gentleman from State Street."

You cannot begin to imagine what a "shot in the arm" this has given us young fellows in the service. For those of us who enlisted around the age of 21, and have been in the armed forces going on five years, our number one worry has been—"Are we going to be too old to return to school or get a good start in the business world at the old age of 26 or 27?"

We can now plainly see what fools we have been. Our number one worry no longer exists. You who recouped your losses; you who survived four wars, five financial panics and the Chicago fire; you who went back to work at 87; yes, you, Mr. Henry Lytton have opened up our eyes and shown us the way!

To you, on your 99th birthday, we of the armed forces hope that it will be possible to present you with a victory in the Pacific, so that you may be able to celebrate your 100th birthday in a world of enduring peace.

Keep singing, Sir—we're all for you!!

Gratefully,

Kenneth E. Morrison

Dear Kenneth:

Your fine letter has aroused such interest among my associates that only now has it been returned to me to answer.

I'm immensely pleased to have it—and to know that it gave you and your buddies "a shot in the arm." Imagine, fellows of your age, even thinking of being "too old to get a good start in business." Yet it's natural that you should wonder about it, with so many of your precious young years already spent in service.

That's what gives me a real "tug at the heart." That's what should make all of us at home redouble our efforts to help you end the war this year—to provide the jobs you so richly deserve.

That's the least we can do for you, Kenneth. And when the peace finally comes, it is only just reward to you that it be an enduring peace.

Sincerely,

Henry C. Lytton

P.S. You have a job here, Kenneth, when you return.

NOTE—From time to time, in this paper, there will appear an article which we hope will be of interest to our fellow Americans. This is number ninety-five of a series.

SCHENLEY DISTILLERS CORP., NEW YORK

Vacation 1945

We are being urgently requested to stay at home during our vacation periods this year. Not an unreasonable suggestion when the facts are bared. Service personnel and essential freight have started their trek westward from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast. There is some unfinished business in the Orient. Passenger trains and buses, too, are crowded to the guards. The movement is "crescendo"—constantly increasing in volume.

Schenley and every other representative American business have long ago cut down to the quick all unnecessary travel. We know too the difficulties of moving consumer goods to nearly all of our forty-eight states.

And that reminds us that not nearly enough has been said about the perfectly miraculous job our American railroads have performed during this critical war-time period.

Courtesy is so apt to go out the window in war-time but we have noticed that both railroad and Pullman employees have retained that priceless word "courtesy," in their minds and on their lips, even under the most trying conditions. Surely there is something about a railroad man. He too is proud of the uniform he wears. His morale is high because he has something more than "payroll loyalty." We're making a note of it in our little white book. Salute!

But we were talking about staying at home this 1945 vacation period, weren't we? "Be at home" when the War Bond seller calls. There's a real patriot. It's a labor of love. To us who buy, it means a profitable investment and just another opportunity to carry our end (the light end) of the load.

A TRIBUNE SOLDIER, ONCE NAZI CAPTIVE, PRAISES RED CROSS

Pvt. Joseph F. Riha

Pvt. Joseph F. Riha, 32, on leave from the engraving department of THE TRIBUNE, who has been returned home for 60 days after seven months as a prisoner of war in Stalag 7-A, Moosburg, Germany, northeast of Munich, said yesterday that many of the American soldiers in his camp could not have survived thru last winter without the Red Cross food parcels.

Pvt. Riha, a member of the 1st army, was captured near the Siegfried line, Oct. 6, 1944, and was released by the 7th army April 30 in Munich, where the prisoners had been moved two weeks earlier.

"During the winter months the German army did not have enough food for its prisoners, but fortunately Red Cross parcels arrived regularly until our bombers disrupted communications so badly that steady delivery was impossible," he said. "Without the food, clothing, and medicine, many of us would not have survived," he added.

Pvt. Riha's wife, Lillian, also a former Tribune employe, and their two children, Judith and Ronald, live at 1843 Maple av., Berwyn.

Dode, motorman on the southbound car, was thrown to the rear of the platform and buried beneath splintered wood and broken glass. Police and firemen worked for 10 minutes before he was freed. He and 10 passengers in his car were taken to St. George hospital. Dode suffered internal injuries and head and body lacerations.

Eight persons in the other street car were taken to Little Company of Mary hospital and treated for cuts and bruises. Kenneth Collins, 38, of 4340 S. TOT DIES OF 23 STAB WOUNDS; MOTHER IS HELD

Peoria, Ill., June 10 (AP)—Mrs. Margaret Thompson, 22, of Peoria, was being held without charge pending a coroner's investigation into the death of her 2½ year old daughter, Patricia Ann, Police Chief Fred Nussbaum said tonight.

The child's body, with 23 stab wounds in it, was found early today.

Nussbaum said Mrs. Thompson, wife of Tech. Sgt. Guy Thompson, overseas, was arrested after she registered in a local hotel this afternoon.

Nussbaum quoted her as saying: "I threw her down a flight of stairs, but when she still lived, I stabbed her with a bread knife. She was living when I choked her."

BRITISH ACCUSE REDS IN DISPUTE ON REPATRIATION

BY JAMES SLOAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, June 10—Britain today denied Russian charges regarding treatment of liberated Russian soldiers and workers pending repatriation. The British foreign office accused the Russians of obstructing the return of their countrymen, and of making it practically impossible for British officers to investigate how British subjects in soviet hands are being treated.

The foreign office made a specific denial of seven charges made recently over the Moscow radio by Col. Gen. Golikov, Russian repatriation commissar, against the allied armies—and added a couple of accusations of its own.

Answering Golikov's assertion that British officers were permitted to visit the assembly camps, quarters for liberated British subjects established at Odessa, Russia, and Lwow and Volkovysk, Poland, the foreign office said "this gives a totally false impression of the facts."

Conditions Compared

"There is no doubt the conditions in which soviet citizens [in British and American hands] are being cared for compare more than favorably with those under which large numbers of liberated British citizens live in soviet occupied territory, many of whom have suffered great and unnecessary hardships owing to the apparent lack of any organizations in forward areas charged with the task of collecting, feeding, clothing, and accommodating them prior to evacuation to Odessa," the foreign office declared.

Despite the fact that the Crimea agreement guaranteed to the allies facilities to examine the treatment of their nationals liberated by the Russians, the British charged, their officers attached to the camp at Odessa were not allowed to live in it or to organize its internal administration, while "very small British repatriation teams were allowed to make a short visit" to the camps at Lwow and Volkovysk, but were ordered to leave.

British Officers Hindered

In both places prisoners still were passing thru the camps when the British were ordered out and at Lwow, when the British officers refused to leave they were "confined to their hotel and prevented from carrying out their duties."

At Lublin, the foreign office said, officers who visited the repatriation camp "found it quite impossible to perform any services for the benefit of the liberated British and United States prisoners, whom they found living in totally inadequate conditions."

"Apart from this," the official announcement added, "there is abundant evidence of the presence in territories under soviet control of many allied stragglers, some in hospitals and others in need of medical attention, but all effort to secure for British repatriation officers freedom of movement which would have enabled them to locate and care for these men have thruout been unavailing."

Many in Nazi Uniform

Explaining why soviet citizens had to be detained by the allies for full investigation, the foreign office said many had been "serving in German military organizations, and considerable numbers of them fell into our hands while in German uniforms."

The statement added that despite the "almost complete lack of parallel facilities for British repatriation teams in soviet occupied territories," the British have made it possible for Russian officers to visit the camps in this country where soviet detainees are being held and to discharge their functions under the terms of the Feb. 11 Crimea agreement.

The fault for any "alleged slowness in repatriating soviet citizens in allied hands" lies with the Russian government, the British charge, because it has "provided no ships whatever for this purpose," causing a heavy drain on allied shipping carrying military supplies and sorely needed relief supplies to liberated countries.

U. S. WRITES FINIS TO SPY CHAPTER IN N. Y. BOOKSHOP

Bares Hidden Source of Data for Nazis

Washington, D. C., June 10 (AP)—For 93 years New Yorkers filed past the musty little bookshop of B. Westermann in midtown Manhattan, stopping perhaps to browse over its sidewalk bookstalls or to buy a first edition. Now it is closed, and the treasury today told why.

For 15 years—since 1926—it was one of Germany's most valuable sources of United States military information, telling the Germans what kind of guns this country was making, how fast American planes would fly, how big a hole an American bomb could make in the Wilhelmstrasse.

Uncover German Connections

These activities came to light in June, 1941, when the treasury stopped out-of-the-country mailing of books and other literature. Westermann's asked special permission to continue mailings.

The treasury did some investigating and this was the story it unraveled:

Ernest Eisele, president of the company, was a native German and a naturalized American citizen as were three of the directors.

The treasury found, too, that since 1926 the firm had lost $25,000 annually but that Eisele had received from German stockholders bonuses totaling $30,000.

Joined Firm in 1926

It was in 1926 also, he told the treasury, that he had joined the firm. He had been approached by a man he did not identify and asked if he would undertake the reorganization of Westermann's, which was being taken over by the Scherl Publishing company of Germany.

The treasury uncovered the fact that the Scherl company was controled by Alfred Hugenberg, who had been general manager of the Krupp plants during World War I. and was Hitler's first minister of economics and agriculture. Later Joseph Goebbels' propaganda agency acquired the Scherl interests.

Sends Aviation Magazines

Westermann's task, the treasury said, was to send such periodicals as the Aero Digest, other aviation magazines, the Coast Artillery Journal, radio craft magazines, and, in general, anything pertaining to mechanics or the military.

Disposition of the Germans involved was not disclosed by the treasury, which said their cases had been turned over to federal enforcement authorities for action.

A department of justice spokesman said Eisele and the company had been indicted in the District of Columbia last January for failure to register as alien agents.

1.76 INCH RAIN TOO MUCH FOR WPA BASEMENT

Heavy showers which poured 1.76 inches of rain on the city between midnight and 6 a. m. yesterday flooded underpasses and basements and tied up surface line traffic in some sections. Shuttle service was used on car lines where flooded streets barred thru traffic.

Lt. Charles Trucksa and six men on his "dog watch" crew in the Berwyn police station spent the early morning hours wading around in six inches of water in their basement quarters at 26th st. and East av.

No drain was provided in the floor of the police quarters when the building was constructed several years ago by works progress administration labor. When water seeps into the basement it has to be scooped and swept over a door sill into an adjoining room where there is a drain.

The policemen were glad to hear that Forecaster P. F. Sutton predicted "nice weather" with the temperature going to 75 today.

DAY by DAY on the FARM — GAIL COMPTON

June 10, 1945

IF work goes according to schedule, corn planting will be finished today on the Wheaton farm. On Friday all fields had been planted except the one south of the machine shed. This was being worked over by disks and harrows.

The manager planned to let this field bake in the sunshine over the week-end in hopes of killing the quack grass. The roots of the pesty weed were turned up by the disks and sun will kill them quickly. Today, weather permitting, the field will be seeded to corn.

Mules Lose to Tractor

Animal prestige slipped another notch lower this year at the farm when the mules lost on the job of pulling the corn planter. Now the job is done by the small farm tractor. The machine does a much better and faster job than the mules. A hydraulic system on the tractor makes turning at the end of the row an easy job. With the pull of a lever the whole planting machine is lifted in the air and the little tractor wheels in its tracks. Then the planter is lowered and set for another trip down the field. This does away with the gas consuming job of backing and turning in wide circles as usually is necessary with the other type of tractor.

Planting this year has followed closely the pattern of last year. In 1944, corn planting was finished about June 10 on the Wheaton farm and around June 1 at the Fox river farm. The latest corn seeded was in 1943 when the Wheaton farm did not finish until June 20.

Turkey Poults Disappear

Two turkey hens at the poultry farm pulled a nasty trick on their children. Each bronze hen had hatched about 12 poults. The poults were several weeks old and doing nicely. Then one day last week the hens took their youngsters for a long walk into the near-by alfalfa field. The alfalfa is tall and rank. When the hens walked back out of the hay their poults had vanished. The flockmaster looked everywhere for the poults but they have disappeared completely. The hens do not seem to mind the loss at all.

The battery in the brooder house resembles living conditions in the city. Month old turkey poults are jammed into the cages with scarcely room to move. The weather has been so cold it has not been possible to put them on range outside. Other cages are crowded with chicks and young guineas which should be enjoying fresh air and sunshine. Perhaps the weather will remain nice now so the crowded cliff dwellers can be moved to more spacious quarters.

The GARDEN by Ben Markland

WITH early radishes, spinach, and green onions now being harvested from many plots, gardeners face the problem of selecting vegetables for replanting in the vacant rows.

It is not too late to plant any of the tender or semi-tender vegetables, but gardeners should avoid June and July plantings of such hardy vegetables as lettuce, peas, radishes, and true spinach. These crops require cool, wet weather for maximum production, therefore thrive in this area if planted in April or early May for spring harvest or in August for autumn consumption.

None of the standard types of spinach should be replanted now. As leaf greens in their place gardeners should plant tampala, kale, Swiss chard, or New Zealand spinach. The last is not a true spinach and withstands hot weather growing conditions.

3 VETS' GROUPS TO HELP IN WAR ON TAX EVADERS

Washington, D. C., June 10 (AP)—Three veterans' organizations have pledged support of the treasury's drive against tax chiselers, the treasury said today.

It reported that national officers of the American Legion, the Disabled American Veterans, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars have agreed to help recruit employes to aid the internal revenue bureau in checking on tax evaders. They will endeavor to attract service men for the 11,000 new positions opened as a result of the drive.

Salary scale for the new positions is $2,600 to $3,200, plus overtime, for agents; $2,000, plus overtime, for deputy collectors; $1,440 and $1,620, plus overtime, for clerical workers. Overtime payments range from $311 to $628 a year at present rates.

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau tonight said his agents have uncovered a Kansas night club and liquor combination that has been ignoring taxes. A federal grand jury at Wichita, Kas., will be given the facts tomorrow, he added.

THE MASTERY OF EUROPE

From certain broadcasts in Europe it might be difficult to tell whether the Reds are in Berlin or the Nazis are in Moscow. Fifty hostages are to be shot for every act of violence committed against the invader. Much as it sounds like a Himmler order in a captive country it happens to come from a Russo-German Communist in what's left of the German capital. Vices attributed to the Nazis are being imitated as virtues or necessities.

Possibly Mr. Churchill truly sees the next great conflict in Europe. In his victory speech he said that nothing was gained in this struggle if we exchanged one police government for another. He couldn't have been plainer if he had said that victory was barren if the Reds stepped in where the Nazis had been. A police government still occupies Berlin and eastern Germany. Its name is different. Its methods are about the same.

Britain went to war against Germany with allies and sympathizers. They quickly collapsed and left England in extremity, prepared to set its home waters afire with oil to save the island fortress. Against Russia, if that conflict comes, it is unlikely that Britain will have any continental allies. As things look now France might be Red or far to the left, and all the little nations, for their own safety, also far to the left.

One solution of the German problem for the Germans is a turn to communism. There were millions of German communists before Hitler. It need astonish no one if the people adopt the hammer and the sickle as the best protection they can find. They are accustomed to police government. If they want revenge on the western allies they couldn't find an easier way to get it, and it wouldn't be a harder way to live. Two or three German "republics" in the soviet union would realize one dream of Lenin. Continental Europe gives every sign of readiness for the Red revolution.

Our Russophiles put out masterpieces of deception, possibly self-deception, in demanding coöperation with Russia for the peace of the world. This is a tough one. Where haven't we coöperated? Where has Stalin coöperated? The American government has poured its supplies into Russia, and the repayment has been in rebuffs. The American army could not get a satisfactory liaison with the Reds. It wasn't permitted. American airmen doing a great service for the soviet union suffered unnecessary losses because the Russians would not allow them to provide their own ground protection.

American missions were excluded from Russian occupied territory. Stalin made agreements at Moscow, Tehran, and Yalta regarding procedure to be followed as the Germans were defeated. He couldn't be persuaded to honor his word. He took the assistance without which he could not have progressed and then made his own terms. He was given coöperation which he accepted as it suited his necessities. There was no reciprocity. Americans have submitted to him. He is distrustful and untrustworthy. If he had lived up to his promises the situation in Europe would not be nearly so uncertain and dangerous. There are limits to one-sided coöperation.

While the American government has been patient Mr. Churchill is getting his spirit up. He opened the general election campaign with references to the British Socialists which the Russians can take as going double for them. The British elections will add nothing to the harmony of Europe. Mr. Churchill makes his view plain that of the two forms of government now in greater conflict than they ever have been one is thoroly rotten.

They are in greater conflict than before because they are closer. Russia is now in central Europe. The buffer states have been over-run. Russia is stronger. The British elections may give the government to the party which calls itself Labor and is called Socialist by the fighting prime minister. Then there may be an attempt at conciliation. If the British Laborites do not get better results than our own conciliators they will not get very far. If Mr. Churchill wins there will be conflict between the two ideas of government. Presently we may be told that the spread of communism in Europe and the dominance of the soviet union on the continent are threats to our national security.

Can we rely this time on a change of attitude in this country? Or will it still be isolationism to say that the United States elects to defend itself and will not send armies abroad again to redress the balance of power? If Europe goes Red, that's that. If Stalin rules where Hitler did the unpleasantness may be great. Some of it may bounce over into this hemisphere. The Red proselyting is as good as the Nazis', and some of our South American countries under the colonels may be ripe for it. Nevertheless, if we have any common sense it will be made clear now that this country will not intervene in Europe because the bolshevists threaten to conquer the world.

The Russians are quite unlikely to trouble Britain with anything but ideas if the English will keep off the continent. Keeping off may be difficult, but it will be safe. It may be equally difficult for the Russians to keep out of Persia and India. There, also, we should not again be the answer to a prime minister's prayer. Early understandings may help a great deal.

Mr. Truman has yet to show his mettle. It might be suggested that altho it was of no consequence where he got his new postmaster general it would be encouraging if he selected as his new secretary of state some level-headed man from Missouri or another "show me" state, one who thought of world wars as not inevitably within the orbit of the United States.

GARBAGE DISPOSAL

Tribune reporters who looked thru Chicago alleys found most of them piled high with garbage, ashes, paper, and other refuse. A few wards or precincts which may be politically preferred were getting the benefit of regular collections, but most alleys were unsightly and noisome, inviting only to the rats.

A number of explanations are offered by city officials. It is said that part of the blame must be laid to citizens, who are not required by ordinance to possess metal garbage cans. They are accused of wrapping garbage in paper or throwing it loose in the alley, forcing collectors to shovel up the refuse and thus slowing up their rounds and preventing them from getting around the city.

Mayor Kelly says he is seeking WPB release of enough steel to manufacture 20,000 garbage cans, and that the city will give them to citizens who need them most if they refuse to buy them themselves. Department stores from time to time advertise cans, and it is hard to believe that any shortage of materials accounts for their absence from alleys. The cans don't cost much. The council ought to pass an ordinance requiring every householder to get one and to punish persons who put refuse anywhere but in the garbage can.

In the elementary thinking of the average citizen, regular collections of garbage are considered an index to the efficiency of municipal government. Chicago is falling down on the job and nothing is causing more grumbling. The problem is by no means insoluble. If the garbage can be picked up just before elections, it can be picked up every week. If we can go in for fancy operations like a municipally owned traction system, we certainly ought to be able to handle something as elementary as picking up the garbage.

THE WARD CASE AGAIN

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago has decided by a vote of 2 to 1 that the seizure of Montgomery Ward and company's properties by the government was lawful. The company had proved to the satisfaction of Judge Sullivan in the District court that congress had not authorized the seizure. The appellate court says that the authorization is found in the war labor disputes act.

This act provides for the seizure of "any plant, mine, or facility equipped for the manufacture, production or mining of any articles or materials which may be required for the war effort, or which may be useful in connection therewith." The decision turns on the meaning to be read into the word "production." The court has sustained the government's interpretation that the distribution of goods at retail is production.

The court leans heavily upon a definition of production found in another act. We should have thought that the intent of congress could have been determined more easily and directly by a reading of the congressional debate on the war labor disputes act itself. Such a reading shows a great deal of concern about strikes in munition plants, airplane factories, shipyards, and coal mines, but no attention is paid to department stores and mail order establishments.

Nevertheless, the court holds that these business houses were included. The court's finding amounts almost to a declaration that congress gave the President power to seize the whole national economy, or rather any part of it that was threatened with labor unrest. If that was, indeed, the intention, it is strange that congress didn't express it more clearly. So large a grant of power, if intended, could have been made in much less ambiguous terms, and if it had been, surely would have aroused a great deal of discussion on the floor.

We hope that the questions will be appealed to the Supreme court and that the court will take the case, if only to obtain a final determination of the law in this matter. The right of the federal government to seize private property is a matter of immense importance to every citizen. In this case, two federal judges have approved it and two others [Judge Sullivan in the District court and Judge Sparks in the Circuit Court of Appeals] have disapproved. It remains for the Supreme court to give the last word, if it will.

Meanwhile, if congress didn't intend to give the executive the broad powers that the appellate court finds in the war labor disputes act, the statute ought to be clarified by amendment without delay.

THE BUREAUS HOPE TO STAY

[Columbus (O.) Evening Dispatch]

The conniving and the jockeying which was bound to come among all the burocrats to justify their jobs and project themselves and their hordes of office holders over into the time of peace has begun.

In all seriousness Man Power Commissioner McNutt said the other day that the United States employment services, which he heads, had a definite place in the future peace picture of the nation. Employment, he said, is a national question, and the federal government therefore should keep and exercise control over it.

Elmer Davis, head of the unwieldy, the often exasperating, and even more often ridiculous office of war information, assumed, wrongly, that upon him and his bureau had fallen the task of censoring the ideas of the beaten Germans.

The OPA, of course, has many times flatly asserted that its control over prices and the distribution of goods must continue until the fires of inflation and scarcity are quenched. And now it proposes a formula of mass production at low prices and high wages, which it no doubt hopes will need OPA direction long into the peace years.

Obviously, the war for the American people will not have ended even with the victory over Japan, for there still will remain for them the battle of the bureaus.

CURIOUS CUSTOMS

Among the curious customs of the American people is the cocktail party for the purpose of preparing the appetite for dinner and trying to talk loud enough to be heard in the general uproar that follows the second round of deleterious concoctions. If one enters into the spirit of the gathering, he often finds that dinner is merely a sequence of dishes of food he can't taste, so he scatters cigaret ashes over them and goes home [we hope] in a daze.

* * *

Among the curious customs of the Japanese is the tea ceremony, at which the guests meditate quietly upon the higher things, possibly on the right altitude for bombing their neighbors' harbors before declaring war. It is a solemn ritual for nibbling sweets and sipping a bowl or two of tea, with rigidly prescribed gestures and obeisances. Foreign devils at a tea ceremony are likely to feel as if they had gone to church by mistake.

* * *

One may regard the Japanese tea ceremony as ridiculous because of the air of large importance that it gives to a small episode of minor refreshment. In war time, certainly, we must continue to wave the flag for the rugged cocktail brawl. But as a matter of fact, the Japs' hocus-pocus over their teakettles outranks the American custom in our own works of reference. The Encyclopedia Britannica, 14th edition, prints three full pages of pictures to illustrate the tea ceremony, while cocktails rate only one small picture in a layout of silversmith's work.

* * *

Every movement of the hands of the host, when preparing and serving the tea, must be what custom has ordained as the most beautiful. The guest must make an obeisance to the host before taking the bowl, must bring it to his forehead before drinking, and should harmonize his mind with the design on the bowl. The drinking must be in three and one-half sips, the latter with a kissing sound of appreciation.

* * *

There are many other rules and regulations, such as crawling thru a hole three feet square to enter the ceremonial room. The Japanese call it Cha-yo-nu, which may be translated literally as "hot water of tea."

HONORABLE DISCHARGE

He waited patiently, the shopping cart
Beside him as he stood outside the stores;
Content to be a shy, unnoticed part
Of week-end crowds engaged in humdrum chores;
And yet his smile of happiness replete
Marked him from other folks, preoccupied
With point and price; as if the busy street
Were paradise, and such tasks glorified!
We understood, when wife and child returned
To form a gay procession, homeward bound;
We saw his discharge button and so learned
Of service years on far-off, alien ground.
The slow tide turns, and men so long away
Find simple tasks of home a holiday.

New Harness for Choppy

Choppy broke his harness, so we bought a new one and removed his old license, which we placed in his "dresser" and forgot about it, but not for long. Choppy is ageing but still strong, and the new harness was weak, so he broke it in one of his lunges.

We bought another, which we knew he could not break. We grabbed a license tag from his "dresser" and placed it on his harness, but afterward we noticed that it read "1937."

Then we began: "Why, Choppy was just a little boy then, and how he has grown. He was only 2 years old, and now he is 10. He has passed thru infancy, boyhood, manhood, and entered his old age in 10 short years."

We looked at one another and were glad he still had the strength to wear out two harnesses. But we wondered how many more? Roy Engel

IS THIS THE PEACE?

(At the grave of a Civil war veteran.)

Here in the brown, unfeeling earth
Of an unknown
Or ill-remembered grove,
Beneath a gray and crumbling stone
That sadly leans askew,
An unrewarded hero of long wars ago
Sleeps dreamlessly at peace.
And yet, and yet . . .
At merest mention of his name
Wild cheers
Should ring out in acclaim.
Is this the peace
For which he bravely fought . . .
Is this the peace?

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks will answer questions of service men, veterans, and their dependents by mail if stamped envelope is sent to 435 N. Michigan av. The Tribune's veterans' bureau, 1 S. Dearborn st., Superior 0200, gives personal interviews.]

L. B. writes: "I have been informed by a sailor in the Pacific that he has three bronze stars for battles and also an arrowhead. He did not say what the last was given for. Can you explain?"

The arrowhead, or spearhead, now is authorized for wear on the theater ribbon along with battle stars to denote participation in an invasion at the time a beachhead is established.

Mrs. F. G. writes: "I have been informed the army and navy are rationing cigarets to military personnel and their dependents. Where can I obtain the rationing points in Chicago? My husband is overseas."

Under the military cigaret rationing system, cards are issued to personnel attached to the various camps, posts, and stations for themselves and their wives. Each is permitted two points a week, which entitles them to six packages of cigarets, 12 cigars, or four ounces of smoking tobacco. No ration points are issued to wives of men overseas.

R. F. A. asks: "Is it possible to draw a disability pension and unemployment compensation at the same time after discharge?"

No. Before unemployment compensation may be obtained you must be able to work, registered for a job with the USES, and then unable to find "suitable" employment.

THE FOUR HORSEMEN

IF history repeats itself we may expect the aftermath of the visit of the Four Horsemen of the Book of Revelation — war, famine, pestilence, and death. Time will tell the extent of the damage.

Can our modern medical machine avert the catastrophes of the past?

War and food shortages go hand in hand. Grain fields and orchards used for battle grounds yield only shell craters and scrap metal. Markets and granaries are not immune to wholesale bombing. Factories have been destroyed and can no longer be converted to the manufacture of plows.

From all this famine develops. Inadequate rations will lead to malnutrition and loss of weight. Dietary deficiencies—when prolonged—lower the reserve of body tissues, making them more susceptible to bacteria. Entire families may sicken and die from infections which ordinarily are well tolerated. Imagine how the victim of peptic ulcer, rheumatic fever, or poliomyelitis fares in such circumstances. Contagious maladies spread like prairie fires. Colds, influenza, tuberculosis, and dysenteries flourish because those who are not affected are too exhausted to prevent their dissemination.

Even tho the patient is reduced to skin and bones thru poor nourishment, in the strict sense, disease is the killer not the meager amount of food. Starvation depresses our vitality and lowers resistance. But this does not necessarily imply that we will lose our immunity to certain ailments. Many so-called famine fevers have nothing to do with nutriment. The misery of war brings poor hygiene and sanitation which invites filth, flies, fleas, lice, and other vermin.

These are capable of sowing typhus, plague, relapsing fever, cholera, and typhoid—even to the healthy, let alone those who are debilitated. They are the real pestilences. Their victims are often more numerous than battle casualties. Most of our great epidemics have occurred under widespread hunger alone or in combination with hostilities.

With a scarcity of food, fear and panic soon develop. A weakened peasant is in no condition to rebuild the country. Several generations may pass before the state of affairs becomes normal. In this way famine plays a role in molding the history of a nation. New leaders spring up, revolutions start, and the migration of peoples begin. The story of Ireland, Russia and England contain such instances.

To a lesser extent, American civilians are encountering difficulty in obtaining balanced meals. In many households, every day is meatless Tuesday. We are leaning heavily on starchy dishes, with insufficient proteins and fats. Of course, if black market activities could be controlled we would have less of a problem.

Armed combat is a terrible ordeal but the sequel of confusion, disorganization, famine, and disease greatly overshadows its horrors.

INSECT BAIT

M. K. writes: What causes susceptibility to infection when bitten by insects?

REPLY

Some individuals react quickly to the material injected by the pests. In the majority of cases, cleanliness will prevent secondary invaders from moving in.

NAIL GROWTH

M. C. writes: If the nail bed is injured, how long a period will be required for the new nail to grow out completely?

REPLY

Three to six months for those on the fingers; 10 to 16 months for the toenails.

SHOCKING VETERANS

R. T. writes: What is the shock treatment of veterans?

REPLY

This procedure is useful in certain mental disorders. The shock is produced electrically or by the use of insulin or metrazol.

INFLAMMATION

Mrs. W. writes: What is mastitis?

REPLY

Infection of the tiny milk ducts of the breast. These structures are more susceptible when fully distended after the baby is born.

ENEMA HABIT

T. J. F. writes: Is it injurious for a 25 year old person to take a daily enema?

REPLY

It is not only inconvenient but may prove harmful. Constipation is a bad habit and can be corrected.

Survey of Human Nature

Remember the classified ad reproduced here a few days ago? The one in which a couple offered to pay for the privilege of sitting on some one's lawn or porch on summer evenings? It did not appear in this paper, as we thought, but in a northwest side neighborhood news, and produced four replies. Three advised the couple to come out any time they felt like it: "There will be no cost whatsoever"; "The air is free" "We believe in the Golden Rule." The fourth opened the conversation by saying: "What will you pay and what is your religion?"

Understatement

William Strand, Tribune writer just back from Iceland, tells of Camp Vail there, an observation outpost set up on a mountain which nursed an old volcano at its heart. The men at the camp were relatively happy at first, but as time went on they noticed occasional tremors from the volcano they had been told was extinct. They naturally did not relish this nor the promising future it foretold. To pacify them, the army carted an Icelandic scientist out to the post to talk to them. The scientist, lecturing in English, told them all about volcanoes and how nice they were, told them what tremors meant, and said he considered the possibility of an eruption remote. "It probably will not erupt," he concluded brightly, "but if it does, you should not worry. You won't know it."

A Soldier and His Allies

Lines from a combat engineer in Europe:

"We volkstrom, 35 years and plus, have been told to ease up on strenuous exercise. That is easy for feet but hard on slow days in Czechoslovakia here. For three hours I have been lying on top of the tower of a castle built in 1356, looking out over red roofed villages, and wondering where now? Some corner where I can help hasten Jap end, painting or planning, I do not know. Values have been cut in many endeavors and directions.

"We are not permitted to converse with Russian soldiers stationed near-by. I have spoken with several by Czech word, German word, my sketches, or hand signs. They all seem good, shy guys with pleasant faces, all romping with friendliness. Many of our officers are too busy at parties to be courteous to Russian officers. Why all this foolishness? Every day people getting together can do more good toward international relations than all the ambassadors on earth with their petty reservations. I am disgusted, disappointed that we have not gained one bit in this blood and flesh deal, with one exception—medicine. Whew! What was that? Skip it. I'd much rather think of how I came within 50 feet of a deer in a forest near the old castle here and saw a pair of red quail and two grouse at the foot of the hill."

Hawaiian Sundial

A recent dissertation in this column on sundials reminded a Nebraska reader, Mrs. Eugene Chrisman, of a sundial her son found recently when on leave in Honolulu. The inscription was:

Ua-Mau-Ke-Ea-O-
Ka-Aina-I-Ka-Pono.

Or, in English: "Hours fly. Flowers die. New days, new ways, pass by. Love stays."

AMERICAN PASSPORT SYSTEM

Minneapolis, Minn., June 4—W. L. White, who in his book, "Report on the Russians" describes life there as being born and spending all of one's life "in a moderately well run penitentiary," perhaps unwittingly has given us a preview of life in our own United States under a broadened social security system.

Those of us who worked in war plants and any other positions rated "essential to the war" know that the social security card was and is the war labor board's equivalent to the police registration card of Russia and Germany, without which one cannot live. In Russia and Germany one presents a police card to get a train ticket or to move from one residence to another. Upon entering a new town he reports and has his record checked. He is as free as a paroled criminal, from birth to death.

Under the proposed broadening of the social security system here, every one secured would carry a perpetual work card. We have only to look to Russia to see what would happen to freedom of movement, life, liberty, or even the pursuit of happiness if ambitious burocrats, under stress of a real or created emergency, were just a bit more successful than they were when they very nearly put over the work or fight bill. Congress should carefully weigh the benefits to be derived from a pittance for one's old age against a life of indignity, political persecution, and constant spying that would make wanting to live not worth while.

OLD LICENSE PLATES OR NONE

Kewanee, Ill., May 31—When one reads how Illinois auto license fees are declining due to the smaller number of cars being operated, it is disgusting to walk down the street and notice one out of every five cars with 1944 license plates, one out of every 25 with 1943 plates, and about one out of 25 without any plates.

The state police could pay their salary for several years in a day by arresting every one with old or no license plates. Maybe the old gag still goes: "Why pick on our police force? They haven't done nothing."

A SUCKER WHO BOUGHT A 1945 LICENSE

TYPED BY HOLLYWOOD

Chicago, June 3—Why is it that whenever Hollywood wants to introduce a "scientist" or "brain" into the story, it is always a chap whose speech runs something like this, "No, zher is nussing I could adwise you aboud now, etc., etc." Hasn't America got anything that even looks like a "scientist"?

SUPERCILIOUS

DOPED WITH PROPAGANDA

Chicago, May 30—I feel that many of your readers would be interested in excerpts from a letter received from a 20 year old boy, a former pupil of mine. This soldier crossed the channel shortly after D-day, was wounded, but had been back at the front several weeks before writing this letter on May 4:

"I interviewed a German woman a while ago, and as a result only became more convinced of the rottenness of the people. She did not believe reports of these murder factories. She said, 'Germany never declared war on America. Why is America fighting us?' She denied that she harbored hate for any one or any nation, and yet the Russians were 'beasts'. I asked her if she had ever heard of Coventry. She replied, 'Yes, but we never bombed any one until they bombed us.' I asked many questions and told her she had been fed propaganda for years, to which she answered her inevitable 'I don't know.' I reminded her that there were always two sides to every question, and she agreed, whereupon I asked if she ever bothered to consider the argument the conquered nations might have had. 'I don't know.' Three of us plied her with questions that went as follows:

"'It is the fault of you and your friends and their friends that Germany will cease to exist as a nation.'

"'I am a woman. I have no part in politics.'

"'Why not? Women do in America, in Britain, in China. Do women do naught but raise children in Germany?'

"'Yes, I suppose.'

"This sort of thing went on and on, and as a grand finale we told her that Germany had been so interested in war that no genius of art, letters, or otherwise had existed in Germany successfully for 40 years, and so naturally she cited Beethoven and Goethe, ignoring our '40 year' clause.

"The powers that be in this nazi bunch had far more imagination than the imitative Japs will ever have. I am convinced that as far as humanity is concerned, the Germans have reached the very depths of decadence."

DE GAULLE GETS IN STEP

Rockford, Ill., June 6—Some people seem to have a grudge against the French, who are carrying on a more or less private war in Syria, shooting down a few people there. We don't know why they should have any objections. The French are doing on a small scale in Syria what the British did on a larger scale in Greece, what Tito has been doing in Jugoslavia, and our pal Joe on a much larger scale in many places. It is hard to say which are the aggressors and which the "peace loving" nations. Anyway, De Gaulle is just keeping in line with the others.

"BREAKING" A WILL

Chicago, June 7—Is it true that a will never can be broken if the person who made it was of sound mind at the time the instrument was signed? E. A.

No, in the sense that there are other possible grounds for setting aside a will. Examples are undue influence and lack of proper statutory execution.

PROBE SLAYING VICTIM'S LOAN SHARK DEALINGS

Langford Borrowed Big Sum, Police Told

New York, June 10 [Special]—A report that Albert E. Langford had been borrowing from loan sharks during the last three months held the attention of police today as they continued their investigation of his slaying last Monday at the Hotel Marguery.

Information reaching police was that Langford's allowance had been cut off by his wealthy wife, Marion, elderly patroness of handsome singers, and that he had obtained $20,000 from professional usurers by promising to pay back $25,000 in 30 days.

Two former members of the Dutch Schultz mob who are said to have been carrying on a loan shark business in the cafe society set were being sought for questioning. They were reported to have dunned Langford several times when he failed to make prompt payment.

Indian Chief Located

Another phase of the investigation failed to yield information on the slaying when Robert Redwing, self-styled Indian chief, was located in Washington, D. C., and said he had not seen the Langfords for two years.

Redwing admitted knowing both Mr. and Mrs. Langford before their marriage in 1942, but denied he had been instrumental in promoting their romance, as charged by Reed Lawton, curly haired tenor, one of Mrs. Langford's proteges.

Lawton has told police that Redwing and a mysterious "Baroness" Beatrice Coleman tried unsuccessfully to obtain $25,000 from the Langfords as a matchmaking fee. Redwing promised to come to New York tomorrow to give police a detailed statement.

Bank Balance of $3,000

Police inquiry into Langford's affairs showed that he had a bank balance of $3,000 on the night he was slain. A business deal in which Langford and Frank Teller, theatrical producer, made a profit on the sale of 300 wallets was investigated.

Teller and Mrs. Vilma Kempton have figured in the investigation because they reached the scene of the slaying before the police. They told police Mrs. Langford phoned that "Bert has been hit on the head and is dying." They found on arrival that Langford had been fatally shot.

AWAIT DECISION TO CARRY WARD FIGHT FURTHER

Whether the Supreme Court of the United States will be asked to hear Montgomery Ward & Co's dispute with the government, which has raised the broad issue of Presidential authority over producers in war time as well as the immediate question of the army's possession of the company's properties, may be indicated today in the Circuit Court of Appeals.

The Circuit court has before it a motion by Ward to stay its mandate issued Friday directing Federal District Judge Philip L. Sullivan, who ruled last January that the late President Roosevelt lacked proper authority for the seizure order, to enter a decision favoring the government. Staying the mandate was asked to give the company opportunity to petition the Supreme court for a writ of certiorari.

United States Atty. Woll declined to say what the government's response to the motion would be. He said if it was decided to make an answer, that probably would be done today. His action, whether to answer or not, is assumed to be dictated from Washington.

3 EX-OFFICERS, 19 MEMBERS OF UNION EXPELLED

As a repercussion of a rank and file revolt last February by members of local 108 of the United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers union [CIO], against what they described as communist domination of the union, three former officers were expelled yesterday and 19 other members were fined $250.

The action was taken at a meeting at 1110 S. Oakley av., attended by only a fraction of the union's 6,000 members. Those expelled are Joseph Hanley, former president; Harold Brandt, former vice president, and James Szlakowski, former financial secretary.

Last March, a rival CIO union, the United Automobile Workers, launched a drive to take over the UFEMW, as a result of which five officers of the UFEMW were suspended in Peoria. Later, a truce was declared between the two unions, and last month it was reported that national CIO officials had ordered a merger of the unions. This move now is being fought by communist leaders of the UFEMW, headed by Joseph Weber, its organization director.

FRENCH TRYING TO UNSCRAMBLE WAIFS OF WAR

Mothers and Repatriates Besiege Center

BY ANNE BRUYERE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, June 10—Frantic mothers who lost their babies during the exodus of 1940, repatriated prisoners and deportees who have found no trace of their families, and natives of villages wiped out by the war daily are besieging the Salvation Army headquarters in the Rue Leonardo da Vinci, the reception center for deported French children.

Looking not at all like the rosy cheeked children painted by Da Vinci, hundreds of bedraggled, open mouthed French waifs reach Paris daily and are immediately placed under medical care.

Four hundred and thirty-one Polish, Hungarian, Czech, and Romanian children, some of whom were born in Buchenwald concentration camp, where their parents died, arrived in Thionville, France, Thursday evening.

Witnessed Executions

Thousands of other children, mostly French between the ages of 4 and 15, have been returning regularly from camps at Compiegne and Dachau. The Nazis had deported some for having distributed underground pamphlets. Most were snatched from their homes as a reprisal. They said that they suffered from cold and hunger and were forced to witness executions.

Salvation Army Maj. J. Pean, who is caring for the children until their parents or relatives can be located, said, "Many French children have forgotten their mother tongue. They babble a private brand of French and German which is impossible to understand. This makes their identification extremely difficult. However, thanks to the mothers who come here daily in search of their children and to scientific procedure, we are managing to ascertain their civil status."

Freed by Americans

The Germans drove curly haired, brown eyed, 8 year old Pierre Rochet of Persan, Oise, with hundreds of classmates belonging to the same "colonie scolaire," to Germany when the Yanks arrived in Paris. These youngsters, reportedly placed by the Nazis on private farms, were freed by the Americans.

Pierre's mother, Madame Henri Rochet, came to Paris by chance and saw her son at the Salvation Army headquarters.

"I had had no news," she sobbed. "Everybody said that he had been killed. We were told that the entire vacation camp had been wiped out. I came to Paris because I felt that somehow my boy was still alive."

HOPKINS TALKS WITH U. S. ARMY CHIEFS IN PARIS

PARIS, June 10 (AP)—Harry Hopkins, President Truman's personal representative, conferred today with United States army officials after his arrival here from Moscow, where he held four talks with Premier Stalin. Hopkins had spent some time in Berlin discussing the occupation of Germany with Marshal Zhukov. Hopkins said he could not make any statement regarding the effect of his talks with Stalin on the San Francisco conference. Political observers said that Hopkins undoubtedly had plans for the forthcoming Big Three conference and was relaying Stalin's views regarding its time and place to Mr. Truman.

500 OF NAZIS' CHILD VICTIMS BEGIN LIFE ANEW

Taste Luxury After 2 Years of Horror

BY ROBERT SAGE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, June 10—More than 500 boys and girls, aged 5 to 19, began life anew in France today.

They are "political" and racial deportees from Poland, Hungary, and Romania. They had spent an average of two years in the worst German concentration camps, including Buchenwald and Dachau.

After two months of American food and medical attention, they arrived last night in France, some 400 going to Normandy and 103 coming to Paris.

First Taste of Luxury

This morning in the Hotel Lutetia, formerly occupied by the Gestapo, the young ex-prisoners who had been sent to Paris were getting their first taste of luxury. Lolling on soft, clean beds, they chattered excitedly in Polish, Hungarian, and German as they awaited the arrival of buses to take them on a tour of the city and a visit to the Vincennes zoo.

An alert little Polish boy of 15 spoke up in English. His parents had been killed by the Germans, and he had been taken from his home in Lwow to Bergen-Belsen, then to Buchenwald. He said he had taught himself English from a textbook he found in a camp.

"Some prisoners gave English lessons," the boys said, "but they were too expensive. One lesson cost 50 grams [1¾ ounces] of bread. All we had to eat was 250 grams [8.82 ounces] of black bread daily. I was always hungry, and couldn't afford to spend by bread."

In the two months he was cared for by the Americans, the boy gained 25 pounds.

Eye Knocked Out

One youth's eye had been knocked out by the Germans. Another's foot had been crushed by a rifle butt. A third had a large scar on an arm where he had been beaten with a steel instrument.

The Americans' treatment already has shown results. Most of the deportees seemed healthy and in good spirits.

An attendant said some of the children were arrested because they were Jews, others because they passed out anti-nazi leaflets or insulted German officers. In a number of cases there was no apparent reason for their arrests, he said.

After four days of resting and sight seeing in Paris, they will go to a rest home in the suburb of Meudon. There they will remain until arrangements have been made for their care and education.

The ceremony was performed by Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora in the justice's apartment a few hours after Jinx arrived from Hollywood by plane. It was the first marriage for the film star. McCrary, army airman, formerly was married to Sarah Brisbane, daughter of the late editor, Arthur Brisbane. They were divorced.

Child Should Be Prepared to Meet Joys and Sorrows

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

We all want better things for our children than we have had ourselves—better in every way. Many of us are like the mother of Jane, who hadn't had many "breaks" in her early life.

"I wish," she said, "that I could be sure that Jane will have a happy, comfortable life." She looked fondly at her daughter, pretty and joyous, with that dewy look of the middle teens.

"Well, she won't," said the father. "Hardly any one does. She's due for the usual lot—unhappiness, worries, anxieties, disappointments, disillusionment, and all the other things that the flesh is heir to. What I do wish for her is courage and character to meet them, and she has those. That is all I can hope for, for her."

Here is the fond, yearning mother, wishing for happiness and fulfillment for her daughter who stands on the threshhold of maturity.

Here also is the more realistic father, knowing that few people reach this goal, that life perhaps at its best is more a pepper-and-salt, a light and dark of happiness and unhappiness, of frustration and fulfillment, of financial security and financial worry, of anxiety and safety, of sorrow and joy. Perhaps the best we can do to prepare our children is to face life gallantly ourselves, and then gradually help them so that eventually they can stand alone, strong and self-reliant.

Looking at Hollywood

—By Hedda Hopper—

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 10—Richard Haymes gets the Fred Astaire part in "Bandwagon" opposite Celeste Holm. He'll make it a singing instead of dancing part. This means that in two years he has had the biggest musicals at Twentieth. Not bad for a boy who was practically unknown when he arrived here. The minute he finishes "Kitten on the Keys" he'll do a hospital tour in the deep south. . . . Don't wonder Frank Morgan's unhappy. Metro wants Charles Coburn for the part Frank should play in "The Green Years." Not that Coburn isn't terrific, but I always believe in giving your family a first chance. . . . Ethel Barrymore will be disappointed that the picture "Miss Hargraves" can't be done because of the cost of production and the impossibility of building massive English sets. . . . Fred MacMurray's latest Paramount picture, "Murder, He Says" [and so do I] should have had him locked up in a padded cell. Everybody in it acted like a fugitive from one.

And 'Twas Ever Thus

I asked Gene Fowler how he was coming along with "Goodnight, Sweet Prince." He said, "We're at a complete standstill. I may have to sell the thing after all. Isn't it funny? It's like a man standing on a street corner selling $5 gold pieces for a buck and nobody will buy. I've had fabulous offers for it, but nobody is willing to take it free." He wants all the profits to go to the motion picture relief home. . . . Buddy De Sylva's mighty sick. He suffered a stroke after a heart attack. Buddy's only about 52. The way these top men burn themselves out is frightening.

Could Be You Or I

Maureen O'Hara's mind was certainly not on her work in "Kitten on the Keys." It was back in Fort Lee, N. J., with her husband, Lt. William Price, who is cutting the pictures he and his camera boys took of the battle of Iwo. Maureen was figuring out how she could get back there and be with him. He's only here a month. She tells me Kathryn Grayson is going to New York just so she can ride back on the plane with her husband before he goes overseas. These two girls live two houses apart and have become fast friends since they became war widows. Maureen said, "I was so afraid my little girl might not recognize her daddy—he's been away so long. But she took to him just like any girl takes to a soldier."

No Mother to Guide Her

Virginia Van Upp likes to listen to her own lines. She was on the set of "Some Call It Love" to hear Rosalind Russell proclaim to a doctor, "It's a man's world, isn't it?" He answers, "No, and it isn't a woman's either—it takes both of them together." . . . Wonder why Harry Hopkins doesn't look into his own household when he talks about beautiful women in Russia. I always thought his wife, Louise Macy, was mighty "purty." . . . Anna Stewart, the ex-Mrs. William McLaughlin II., was told, "you ought to be in pictures." Well, now she is. She's signed with Twentieth and photographs like Carole Lombard and Anna Sten. Is that bad!

They're Good Neighbors

Jinx Falkenburg's party before planing out to become Mrs. Tex McCrary in the east was something. It was to open a shop of Mexican woolen goods. I'm sure the party cost all the profits for six months. It was done in the Mexican manner with Paulette Goddard dressed in a simple little white cambric blouse, bare midriff, blue fringed shorts, bejeweled and bedazzling with a ruby and diamond heart in the hair, earrings to match, clips and rings to match those. She brought along a gay Mexican riding costume heavily embroidered, laced up the side with buttons of bronze heads of bulls. At my insistence she put on the jacket and trousers and changed her jewelry to match. On her wrist was a heavy gold watch with royal Mexican crest. . . . All our designers, except Irene, turned out. Gary Cooper's parents, who live next door, were among the guests. I talked with Mrs. Frank Capra. She doesn't know when Frank will start a picture. Mrs. Lewis Milestone came hatless, ditto Esther Williams. Florence Pritchett was a breath of Park av. with Mrs. Danny Danker in new fur tippet. All the ladies were gay and polite, and all their brightly colored clothes swore like pirates at each other. The donkey in the corner of the garden just kept on braying. ANSWERS TO SATURDAY'S QUIZ

Q. 1—As South you hold:
♠AJ75 ♥5 ♦Q107 ♣AQJ94
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 club	Pass	1 diamond	Pass
1 spade	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Three diamonds. This may appear the least bid aggressive, since apparently you have already shown the full strength of your hand, but night must not be lost of the increased value of the queens of diamonds. If partner has a good diamond suit and a heart stopper the knowledge that the diamonds will run may permit him to try three no trump. If he has nothing but diamonds a contract of three should still be safe.

Q. 2—As South you hold:
♠10 ♥KJ1096432 ♦A62 ♣J
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	1 heart	Pass
2 hearts	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three diamonds. A temporary measure, with the intention of bidding at least five hearts on the next round. The you have only two honor tricks slam prospects are very bright in view of your enormous playing strength and splendid controls. If partner has two aces there ought to be a good play for the slam.

Q. 3—As South you hold:
♠5 ♥Q74 ♦K102 ♣AKJ753
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	Pass	2 clubs	Pass
2 hearts	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two no trump. Since partner might well have a four card heart suit a raise of that suit is not desirable. If partner rebids the hearts you will of course raise to four. If he goes on with the no trump that should be the best contract. Don't make the mistake of wasting time to tell of your good club suit.

Q. 4—As South you hold:
♠AJ954 ♥K2 ♦K964 ♣A9
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 hearts	Pass
2 spades	Pass	3 diamonds	Pass
4 diamonds	Pass	4 hearts	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Five clubs. A splendid 5t has been established and possession of the ace of clubs should be shown inasmuch as a slam is more than likely.

Q. 5—You are South, vulnerable, and you hold:
♠A63 ♥QJ ♦KJ10754 ♣K5
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 club	1 diamond

What do you bid now?

A.—Three hearts. Partner is marked with a fairly good heart suit since it is apparent that he has no great honor strength. His voluntary bid is a higher ranking suit indicates that he is not too displeased with diamonds, which for all he knows you might be obliged to rebid.

Q. 6—Opponent opens with one club and you hold:
♠KQ103 ♥KQ63 ♦QJ102 ♣7
What do you bid?

A.—Double. You are a little light on the honor trick side, but you have the ideal distribution and strength in the majors. Some action by you is obligatory and it would be pointless for you to guess what suit to bid.

Q. 7—As South you hold:
♠AK43 ♥1052 ♦A63 ♣Q43
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 spade	Pass
2 hearts	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. With passing partner you should abandon hope for game and play for what appears to be a comfortable part score.

Q. 8—As North you hold:
♠KQ5 ♥AQ5 ♦73 ♣KQ1094
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	1 heart	Pass
2 hearts	Pass	3 diamonds	Pass
3 no trump	Pass	5 hearts	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. While you have a very fine hand and partner's bidding has been strong, you must expect to lose to the ace of spades, which your partner has failed to show and the ace of clubs which he would have indicated if it was held by him. This is the mate to the hand shown in the second problem.

Novel Tenderly Translated in 'Mr. Emmanuel'

"MR. EMMANUEL"

By May Tinée

Adapted from Louis Golding's novel, "Magnolia Street," this British film is a touching story of a gentle, elderly Jewish man and his efforts to help a tormented child. The youngster is a refugee from Germany, living in England. His father had been killed by the Nazis, and his mother's long silence makes the boy believe that perhaps she has met the same fate in Germany. Armed with his British passport and with the belief that his race and nationality will be respected, old Mr. Emmanuel goes in search of the missing woman.

Amazed but undaunted by the open cruelty and hatred shown his race in that country, the old man persists in his efforts in spite of the Gestapo. His life is saved by the daughter of an old friend who dares not show her interest in the case but quietly bullies her lover, a high party official, into protecting the old gentleman.

The mother's reaction, when she is finally found, seemed rather incredible to me, but apparently many persons did lose all decency and loyalty or dared not demonstrate such qualities under the Hitler regime.

The acting is capable, and Felix Aylmer in the leading role makes his Mr. Emmanuel a most likable man. Greta Gynt is handsome and has a pleasing singing voice, and young Peter Mullins is a pathetic little refugee.

Much of the sound was blurred and scratchy when I saw the film, and it was frequently difficult to understand the dialog.

On the whole, it is a somber, thoughtful film, and it's heartwarming to think that such suffering by thousands of helpless people was ended when the allied forces achieved victory.

Black and White Costumes Go with a Smooth Suntan

BY REA SEEGER

One of the smartest color promotions of the summer is that dramatizing coal black with chalk white. Of course, it's the sharpest combination known, and when the two are separated, either is ideal contrast for a smooth suntan, the deeper the better.

The casual play clothes are knockouts. See the peasant style gathered skirt of three flounces that is matched to a shirred halter-bra model, stunning black canvas play shoes with soles of rope of woven raffia in a natural tint, or the demure ballet slipper type play shoes of black [all unrationed] with a tiny string bow at the instep.

On the white side are just as many stunning outfits, both for play and town wear. Spic and span white shorts with ruffles, matched to ruffled bras; sleek tailored slacks with shirt tops cut to expose the diaphragm; white ballet slipper play shoes, white hats, bags, and gloves, all the newest clever vestees that tie on and show to dashing advantage a deep golden sun tanned back and arms—these are some of the summer clothing useful as contrast for backs and blacks.

Families Feast Sons Returned from Captivity

BY JUDITH CASS

DREAMS of home, good food, and reunions with relatives and friends are being realized by a number of young Chicagoans who have returned to tell of their adventures in German prison camps.

Lt. John H. Palmer of the navy air forces, who was reunited in Chicago recently with his mother, Mrs. Percival B. Palmer Jr., and wife, the former Caroline Wheeler, was one of two navy officers held at Stalagluft 3, an army air forces prison camp east of Berlin. Lt. Palmer was shot down while flying from a carrier off the coast of Norway. When the Russian armies advanced on Berlin, the prisoners of his camp were marched to Nurenberg and later to Moosburg. As soon as all of the former Stalagluft 3 prisoners from Chicago return to their homes, they hope to have a reunion of the Chicago club which the 85 Chicago men who were captives there formed and which held meetings once a week.

Lt. Palmer, who saw his young son, John Jr., for the first time when he returned home, took his family to Lakeside, Mich., yesterday to stay until the middle of July. When his leave is over he will take a refresher course before reporting for duty.

Several other young Chicagoans who returned recently were held at Moosburg, described as among the best prison camps in Germany. Lt. Henry Adams Dangler of the army air forces arrived in Lake Forest on Thursday night and since then has been busy telling his parents, the David Danglers, of the 10 months he spent at Moosburg. He was shot down over Austria last June.

Now back in Chicago after three months in German prison camps, Moosburg among them, Lt. John Bokum of the army air forces already has regained 30 of the 50 pounds he lost during his imprisonment. He is staying with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Bokum.

Another former Moosburg captive, Lt. Peter Berkey III., returned last week to the Lake Shore dr. apartment of his father, Peter Berkey.

Every ring of the telephone has Mrs. Robert T. McDevitt hoping for news of her brother, Sgt. John McEwen Jr., who was a prisoner of war for more than two years. Captured in North Africa in April, 1943, Sgt. McEwen was held at Surstenburg on the Oder river in Germany until most of the prisoners were moved to Luckenwalde when the Russian armies closed in. He finally was freed by the Russians, and altho his family knows that he now is in the hands of the Red Cross he has not arrived in this country. Sgt. McEwen lived in Winnetka with Mr. and Mrs. McDevitt before entering the army.

Engagement News

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Straus of New York and Purchase, Westchester county, N. Y., announce the engagement of their daughter, Florence Guggenheim, to Lt. Max A. Hart of the army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham S. Hart of Highland Park. Lt. Hart and his parents are in New York spending the first part of his 30-day leave following return from overseas duty. The wedding will take place next Sunday in the home of Miss Straus's parents at Purchase.

Miss Straus studied at the Brearley school in New York and at Dana hall, was graduated last year from Sarah Lawrence college, and now is attending the New York School of Social Service. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. Oscar Straus and the late Mr. Straus, who was United States ambassador to Turkey and secretary of commerce and labor in President Theodore Roosevelt's cabinet; and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim. Lt. Hart, whose paternal grandfather, the late Max Hart, was a pioneer Chicago merchant, was graduated from Northwestern university. He also is a grandson of Mrs. Alfred Hart and the late Mr. Hart of Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Trottman of Evanston announce the engagement of their daughter, Gwendolen, to Lt. Loren A. Schmidt of the army air forces, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Schmidt of Kansas City. Miss Trottman attended the Roycemore school,

How They Talk

Then, there was an incident a few days ago that is vivid in my mind. Two bosses, seated in a restaurant, were discussing their stenographers. One said he had a poor steno—"When I say shorthand she thinks I mean a laborer 4 feet tall," was his description of the mental powers of his WCG. Then, this master of rhetoric continued, "But your stenographer is entirely different. She knows what she is doing and as far as looks are concerned, I slurp!"

I asked our bobby-socks steno what slurp means and she says it means to drool. NOSEY PARKER II

Just Looking, Thanks

"Where is Cullie," some one's asking?
Tell you what I'm gonna do:
Give a hint; if closely followed
You will find an easy clew.

Look for easy tears or laughter,
Look for skeptics hiding pain,
Hunt on windy hills for dreamers,
Peer at strollers in the rain.

If you find them, or just merely
If you know that these there be—
You are on the way to finding

Six Wise Men Speaking

Great opportunities come to all. . . . A wise man will make more opportunities than he finds. . . . The greatest opportunity that can come to a man can never be greater than his preparation. . . . Calhern Talks About "Cyrano," Maggie Teyte Comes to America

Perhaps one of the secrets of keeping a good role fresh thru a long run is to work on a better one. Louis Calhern has been soaking up "Cyrano de Bergerac" thru the long months of his distinguished performance in "Jacobowsky and the Colonel," and when he reluctantly doffs the picturesque regalia of the displaced colonel at the Blackstone Saturday night, it will be to delve deeper into Rostand's poetic melodrama, which he will do for Jed Harris in the fall. Hiram Sherman is to play the lyrical pastry cook, and Mr. Harris, considered by Mr. Calhern the outstanding talent in contemporary theater, will direct. As for the treasured Brian Hooker adaptation, that belongs to Walter Hampden, who has cause to know its worth. Mr. Calhern will use it if he can get it.

Cyrano, says Calhern, is his dream role, tho he insists that had he created Father Day in "Life With Father," he would have kept on playing him the rest of his life. Still, even in the days when other actors spouted Hamlet with Jack Barrymore gestures, Calhern was true to the knight of the purple dusk whose voice gives vicarious life to sawdust Christian, as greatbeaked Cyrano hides from his love.

Perhaps it was because he considered Barrymore the greatest of actors that he has no desire to follow his Shakespearean footsteps, tho he can turn into that very Barrymore before your eyes. At any rate, after an actor's lifetime of servitude in support of stars—he says Ethel Barrymore in "The Love Duel" gave audiences strictly to understand that she tolerated this fellow only for purposes of the script—and after Hollywood typing as a gangster because he can look like an implacable eagle, Calhern found his stepping stone to Cyrano in his current role, which wields a tattered cloak and a rusty sword in a brilliant last stand of chivalry elegance and the grand style.

The late Alexander Woollcott egged him on to play Cyrano, just as he bullied him into beginning the book to be called "Some of This Is True," and which may be subtitled, "Observations of a man with no visible means of support," because that was Woollcott's ironical description of one of the handsomest men in theater. The book isn't autobiography, but rather recollections and reflections of an actor who saw his tribe get to be just like other prosperous people, living in suites instead of hall rooms in theatrical boarding houses and acquiring tailoring to match. Calhern conforms, with a rueful twitch at his own impeccable sleeve, but he still feels the insecurity of those older days. Even on his way to Chicago after a year of "Jacobowsky" he studied his part on the train—which may help explain the freshness of his performance.

He would like—mind you, this is speculative—to open "Cyrano" in Chicago in November. Our reopening Majestic-Shubert would be ideal for that expensive production always shuttling a huge cast from scenic pillar to post. We can hope, can't we?

Notes

Maggie Teyte is being brought from England on July 15 by Austin Wilder for radio and other performances thru November. . . . Beverly Chambers of "I Remember Mama" replaces Augusta Dabney in "Dear Ruth" July 2. . . . Opening night of "Ballet Russe Highlights" at Orchestra hall on July 6 is a benefit for the Illinois Opera Guild's fund to help students attend opera. . . . Tonight at 7 o'clock at the Service Men's Center, 176 W. Washington st., a man in service, a WAC, and a WAVE will draw three lucky numbers that send them to "Jacobowsky and the Colonel" as guests of the stars, who later will take them to the Pump Room and the Chez Paree.

Young Soprano Closes Season at Kimball Hall

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG

With the song recital of Eugenia Sarros last night, Kimball hall's long season of concerts came to a close. It was a season marked by an extraordinary number of aspirants to musical fame and success, by the paucity of genuine and distinguished talent among them, by amazingly large attendance, and by the appallingly low standards of training displayed by the average recitalist. It was, on the whole, another depressing evidence of the decline of Chicago as a center of real musical culture.

Eugenia Sarros fell in the well populated category of the young musician with some natural gifts which have been sadly misguided and misdirected. Her soprano voice is by nature a full and voluminous one, with what could be, if proper advantage were taken of it, a most attractive quality. As now used it is projected with a hollow, empty sound that nullifies all attempts to color the tone or infuse it with variety of expression.

Not that Miss Sarros' efforts in this latter direction were particularly notable. There were some pleasant moments in her singing of songs by the Americans, Campbell-Tipton and Ernest Charles, and by the Greeks, N. Hatziapostolou and N. Roubanis. But her major efforts—the "King of Thule" ballad and Jewel song from "Faust," and "Pace, Pace mio dio" from "La Forza del Destino"—were thwarted by utter innocence of operatic tradition, by disturbing lapses of rhythmic security, and by such inexplicable textual revisions as the omission of the trills from the Jewel song.

Louise Arnold's accompaniments were likewise not examples of impeccability, but her four solos disclosed a certain degree of pianistic competence.

Society Will Hear Talk on Eclipses Tomorrow Evening

Appearing under auspices of the Burnham Astronomical society, Thomas J. Bartlett will give an illustrated lecture on "Eclipses of the Sun and Moon" at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Chicago Academy of Sciences, Clark st. and Ogden av., in Lincoln park. His program is timely because of the July 9 eclipse of the sun. Mr. Bartlett is an instructor at the Dearborn observatory of Northwestern university. Preceding the lecture, Frank G. Callender will comment on aspects of the June sky of interest to amateur observers. Telescopes of two types, refractors and reflectors, will be set up, weather permitting, outside the academy for observation before and after the meeting. Admittance is free to all amateur astronomers.

'Midsummer Nightmare' . . . . . By Christopher Hale

(Copyright, 1945, By Mrs. Frances Stephens)

SYNOPSIS: Olivia Warburton and her secretary, Winnie Leslie, occupy a cottage, cared for by Tillie, on the Jennesma estate. The Jennesma factory is managed by Dirk Adams, Winnie's fiance. Sybrand Jennesma plans to manufacture his brother Gerrit's latest invention, a car motor, and hopes to interest Morgan Riley. Sen. North, Riley's investigator, falls in love with Olivia. Jason Kimball, in charge of publicity, is fond of Winnie. The oft-married Hilda Jennesma Paradine claims money is missing from her cottage. Hilda is found murdered—stabbed. Tillie tells Police Lt. French that Olivia, who walks in her sleep, went downstairs during the night and took the knife from the kitchen. The missing money is found in Winnie's room. Dirk was with Hilda shortly before the murder. Olivia finds herself turning to Sen. North, but there is a barrier, a secret marriage in her youth. Tillie is poisoned. Gerrit receives four anonymous threats. Tillie had deposited $5,000 in cash in her bank and had bought arsenic at the drug store. The knife is found in Olivia's garden. Dirk's I. O. U. for $5,000 is among Hilda's things. Olivia is warned. Tho attacked and wounded, Gerrit refuses medical aid. French believes Hilda planted the money in Winnie's room. Gerrit's workshop burns, but his motor design is safe. His body is found. He was dead before his body was burned. French asks Olivia to remain, offering protection. Kim drives Winnie to Dirk's home, where she learns Dirk gave $5,000 to the woman with whom he lived to be released. Winnie realizes it is Kim she loves. Sybrand will not go on with the business, so North prepares to leave. Sybrand asks Olivia to leave at once.

AFRAID

Miss Warburton felt she must make one last attempt to help Sybrand. She leaned across the desk: "Mr. Jennesma. Please think this over. Just once more. I think . . . maybe . . . when you consider everything . . . you'll change your . . ."

She stopped. The kind smile on her lips froze before the queer stare he was giving her.

Why, she thought, he's afraid of me. Of me, Olivia Warburton. After all we've been thru. After all these years. He stood up for me for days, as long as that poor flabby character of his would let him . . . and now . . . now he is wondering if he wasn't a fool to do it.

Then she had another idea. Who had persuaded him to turn on her like this? Who had destroyed his family and now was working on his last most loyal friend so he could be utterly alone? For one couldn't count his wife! What shrewd brain was behind this plan of divide and conquer?

"No . . . no . . . I have thought it over. This is final!" he was babbling.

"Very well," she said quietly. "I'll be out as soon as I can."

Sen. North was waiting on the front porch as she came out. He was dressed for town. In his hand was an umbrella and at the foot of the steps waited the Jennesma coupe he usually borrowed.

"Don't make me talk," she manage! to say. "Im leaving here. Before night."

"Don't go till I get back, my dear. I won't be later than five. I'll drive us both away from here, then."

She gave a little start.

He said quietly, "I'll take you wherever you want to go, Olivia. I have much to say to you."

"Very well. But be as quick as you can."

The cottage was cold, damp, depressing when she entered it. The trooper guard was nowhere to be seen. Winnie had left with her father and Kim.

Miss Warburton called Lt. French on the phone but was unable to locate him. She left her number and went upstairs to pack.

Jerrold Corbin knocked on the big white door he had so often opened with his own latch key. What a fool he had been to let Hilda divorce him! He could have had all this, instead of that sap, Paradine.

A stolid gray Holland woman admitted him to the hall. It had been done over since his time.

Eddie Paradine tripped into the living room of their late mutual wife's house. His socks, tie, and handkerchief border were all chartreuse!

"Hello, Eddie." Corbin was horribly genial. "I'm just taking a chance on your being a regular guy. I'd like to hunt for something in this house."

"O yes," said Eddie blandly. "Hilda's alleged second will?"

Corbin jumped. "Uh . . . yes." He added, warily, "Of course I could get a court order or a search warrant or something, if it was necessary. But I thought maybe I could save that trouble."

Eddie smiled. He didn't look nearly so infantile if you looked at him closely, Corbin discovered.

"I doubt if you could get any order, Corbin. The state police have been over this house with a microscope, and I needn't tell you I've had a peep or two myself. But . . . wait . . . don't interrupt me . . . I know you'll never rest till you've looked, too, and I don't want to keep combing you out of my hair. So . . . I'm going to let you go to it . . ."

"That's white of you, Eddie," Corbin said.

"Yes, isn't it! All I insist on is that I stick with you. Take it or leave it."

"Sure, sure," Corbin said. "All the better. You can see I don't make off with the silver." He tittered nervously.

Eddie laughed too, but it was not at that sad joke. Corbin couldn't know he merely wanted to enjoy his frustration and fury at close range.

Two hours later, Corbin left the house. There was nobody to hear what he said as he drove away to his lonely hotel room. His wife had locked him out. After all, it was her house.

Miss Warburton had tea and a sandwich in the damp, chilly living room at half past one. Very depressing. She missed Winnie.

Queer French didn't call her, she thought. She even sat down at the telephone and considered dialing his number. But there was plenty of time. Only 2:15.

She went up and finished packing.

At 3 she was considering a bath and nap.

The long expected telephone call came as she was about to undress. It was French. He was sorry not to have called sooner. An emergency case had practically exploded in his face.

Miss Warburton explained what had happened that morning. She couldn't help it if she'd been dismissed, could she? She had put up quite an argument and it only made things worse.

"What do you mean?"

"O, I annoyed him. And then, Lt. French, I discovered something too utterly absurd. He's afraid . . . of me! Imagine that! No . . . it's not an aberration of mine. I saw it in his eyes. But he's wrong, poor thing!"

"Are you sure of that, Miss Warburton?"

"O yes. I . . . hardly blame him . . . I mean for being afraid. I was afraid, too, this morning. But it seemed to me that something awful is going to happen to him. A premonition. Am I just being morbid?"

"No. I'm afraid you're right. Sen. North has just caught up with me, and that seems to be his impression, too. Now, will you do me a favor? Call my trooper to this telephone and . . ."

"Your trooper? But I thought you'd withdrawn him. I haven't seen him since I returned to the cottage this morning."

"Have you looked for him?"

"Well, yes. Just a bit. I even called once."

"Miss Warburton, listen carefully," French's voice was clipped, fast. "I want you to . . ."

She waited. But he didn't go on. She told him she was still there . . . listening . . . but nothing happened. She became aware of complete silence. No buzzing, no current. The line was dead as a rope.

She hung up and huddled in her chair.

It was impossible to pretend the storm had knocked a tree across the wires and brought them down.

When the knock came on the back door, she felt her whole body leap to the sound. The door was locked, she knew. All the doors were locked, and the windows, too. As if that would mean anything to any one who wanted to break in.

Suddenly she thought, that might be the trooper, roused by radar, or some other mysterious modern miracle.

Thru the Looking Glass

Next Sunday, you'll remember, is Father's day, the day on which we women, who ordinarily receive gifts from men, have a chance to even things up.

You can put it down to prejudice if you like, but we think toiletries are a pretty wonderful present. What's more important is that men think so too, and the proof of this lies in the fact that from day to day more men buy toiletries for themselves than even the manufacturers fondly hoped they would. Men use them unashamedly nowadays and broadcast their preferences.

If the father in your house has strong likes and dislikes, by all means buy him something in a line he prefers to use. If he's the kind who likes to try new things, give him something new and different. Something snazzier, too, than the stuff he's been using. Men like a touch of luxury to their possessions just as much as we do.

Don't think for a minute that father won't like cologne. Maybe he's never bought any for himself, but once he finds out how a bit of cologne, in a fresh scent that isn't offensively sweet, will bolster his sense of well grooming, he'll be a user for life.

And don't think that he won't be smitten with a soap that's luxurious. He'll like big, plump masculine cakes of good quality and clean fragrance that are his and his alone. Talcs, too, are good—and you can buy them in a flesh tint.

Shaving things, of course, are practically infallible choices. Replenish his supply of his pet products if you want to be practical; if you want to be festive get him something beautifully packaged, beautifully made, and quite unlike the purely utilitarian things he buys for himself now and again at the corner drug store. To keep a high shine and clear golden color on copper cooking utensils, go over them frequently with a salt and vinegar rub. Works wonders! . . . Two tablespoons of vinegar to a quart of water will clean aluminum which has darkened. Boil the solution in the pan for a few minutes.

Never scour aluminum with soda or a strong alkaline soap. Alkalies pit the metal. Fine steel wool is the best scouring agent. . . . Cook tomatoes and rhubarb in porcelain enamelware, not aluminum. Being strongly acid, these foods may take on a metallic flavor from the metal. This metallic flavor is not at all harmful as some food cranks think, but the unspoiled fruit flavor is pleasanter. Clean enamelware with fine scouring powder; boil a weak soda solution in enamel pans to remove burned food which clings.

To "break in" cast aluminum, scour with steel wool and scouring powder to remove the manufacturer's lacquer coating. Then wash and dry. Grease inside and out with salad oil or vegetable fat [or any unsalted edible fat] and leave in a slow oven for two or three hours to allow pores of the metal to fill up with oil. Wash again, rub lightly inside with grease and the utensil is ready to use. Repeat this seasoning any time the utensil shows signs of rust.

Cast iron will discolor tomatoes. Again, no harm done, but who wants dark tomatoes?

Stainless steel usually needs only soap and water cleansing, but overheating will cause discoloration which may be removed with scouring powder and a damp pad. Do not use steel wool on stainless steel, and be careful to use it only over low heat. Salt and vinegar corrode the metal.

Avoid changes in temperature for glass cooking utensils, and clean them only with soap and water, unless food has burned on. Then soak in warm water or use a fine scouring powder. Coarse scouring materials scratch the surface.

Earthenware top-of-range and oven utensils should be treated like glass. Earthenware never should be subjected to changes in temperature like placing a hot piece in cold water. It will last for years if tempered before use. Place the piece in water to cover, bring the water to a boil, boil five minutes, then turn off heat and allow the ware to cool in the water.

Sally Explains Three Requests for Clothing

[Sally Joy Brown department activities are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.]

BY SALLY JOY BROWN

Mr. R. is 86 years old and because of a severe arthritic condition is unable to walk. For several years his only income has been a small old age pension, sufficient to provide little more than food and shelter. Since he has been unable to replace any of his clothing and the only suit he owns is now badly worn and very shabby, our assistance has been asked in obtaining one for him. He is 6 feet tall and weighs about 135 pounds. He wears size 40. A bathrobe also would be very acceptable. The address is on the north side.

Mrs. L., who lives on the south side, writes:

"I hope to be able to receive assistance thru your column. I have been ill for a number of years, a shut-in much of the time. Recently there has been an improvement in my condition; I am able to be up and about and would like so much to attend church. The relief provides my living essentials, but I am greatly in need of street clothing and would be grateful for a dark spring coat and dress, size 44-46."

From Mrs. C. of the west side:

"I have heard of the help that you have given others, and I am writing to ask if you would please help me. My husband is in the Pacific. Our two boys, 7 and 10 years old, are badly in need of clothing. The younger boy has been very ill for a long time and requires careful nursing care. It is therefore impossible for me to seek employment to supplement the family allowance. After the rent, food, and doctor bills are paid there is nothing left for clothing. I would be truly grateful if you can get them some in sizes 6 and 10, and shoes, size 12 and 2½."

SOX SPLIT; CUBS WIN 2 FROM REDS, 10-7, 7-4

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD

THE navy is making an effort to clarify and standardize regulations covering athletic participation in events not directly connected with activities on the various naval posts. . . . Present directives are ambiguous and contradictory, and in some instances even admirals are unable to interpret them intelligently. . . . Big Ten fans predict that George Walker of Illinois may become the greatest hurdler of his generation. . . . His time of :23.4 for the 220 yard lows was the best made in the conference meet in 10 years, and he's only a freshman. Lt. Angelo Bertelli, Notre Dame's great forward passer, gave this answer in an Esquire questionnaire as to why he signed to play pro ball: "I signed with Los Angeles of the new All-America conference because it got there firstest with the mostest, also because I believe in what it stands for. It gives the college player the break he deserves. He now can go the highest bidder instead of having to go where the National Football league draft takes him." . . . Dave Shade, who earned more than half a million in the prize ring, operates a tavern in Pittsfield, Mass. . . . His brother, George, who also was a boxer, is a San Francisco roofer. . . . Ted Hayes, trainer for Jack Dempsey in the latter's early days as heavyweight champion, has made good in a big way as the head of a munitions plant near Washington, D. C. . . . The French government budgeted 160,000,000 francs for physical education and sports in the first three months of 1945. . . . Col. Don Storck, recreation officer for the army air forces, was a football star at West Point in the early '20s.

Tyrus Kaufman of Gridley, Ill., high school, who was named for Ty Cobb, has taken no luster from the famous ball player's attainments. . . . He was graduated this spring with a scholastic average of 3.989 out of a possible 4.0. . . . He won 12 athletic letters, was editor of the high school annual, president of the student council, superintendent of the Methodist church Sunday school, and a member of the glee club, dramatic club, speech club, and the band. . . . He has passed the navy radar exam. . . . The most envied athletic instructor at the navy's Treasure Island base in San Francisco bay is Charles Volz, who gives tri-weekly classes for WAVES. . . . The course includes reducing, weight gaining, leg buildup, and chest expansion. . . . Schoolboy Rowe is managing a baseball club in the Army Hawaii league. . . . Tommy Chapman, former star University of Iowa basketball player, has been awarded the oak leaf cluster to the air medal. . . . A fighter pilot in the India-Burma theater, Chapman has 50 missions to his credit.

The City

The city's massive stone and steel gulp up the flaming day
And throw it back against the night lest weary hearts find rest;
O, how I wish my burning feet were treading the green way
Thru countrysides where vagrant streams purl seaward unoppressed!

The chimneys spew their inky soot upon the summer air,
And dust in whirlpools rises from the street to blind our eyes;
O, for a country lane with fragrant flowers everywhere,
And the cool breeze as soothing as the cloudless evening skies!

Our nerves are frayed and fretful from the city's rush and whirl,
The tumult and the clamor of the traffic is complete;
I'd give the world to be again a simple peasant girl
Hearing the brown thrush singing in some shadowy retreat.

Detroit, Mich., June 10—The wandering White Sox submitted without much protest to the speed of Paul Trout in the first game of a double header today but later developed some batting power that made even Boss Jim Dykes blink in amazement.

The Sox succumbed to Trout, 3 to 2, the pitching victim being John Humphries, but bounced back with a 15 hit assault that carried Orval Grove to his sixth victory of the season, the score of this one being 9 to 4.

The defeat in the second game forced the Tigers to relinquish the American league leadership to the New York Yankees, who won a single game from the Boston Red Sox.

On a hit basis, the pitching of Humphries in the first game wasn't bad but distance was involved. He yielded only four hits in seven innings but among them were a homer and double by Roy Cullenbine and one of the other two hits was a single that helped the same Cullenbine to score for the third time after he had been nicked by a pitched ball. As for Trout, he had the argument in hand until the ninth, when his lame back forced him to ask for relief.

Grove Gets Into Trouble

With the 15 hit assault, which included a homer by Bill Nagel—who got into action because of a lineup change—and triples by Guy Curtright and John Dickshot, the second game should have been a romp but it developed pains so acute that Grove was forced to abandon his exhibition before 30,933 cash customers.

The Sox pummeling which knocked out Frank Overmire and eventually did the same for Walter Wilson was so expertly handled that Grove was the owner of a six run lead in five innings, during which he yielded only two hits. Another run was added to his margin in the seventh and he promptly collapsed. In the same inning the 36 year old Paul Richards smacked him for a homer while the bases were filled and soon thereafter Grove was taken into protective custody by his boss. Ed Lopat went the remainder of the distance without encountering much trouble.

The Cullenbine homer with which the Tigers began to pin down Humphries in the first game sailed into the right field upper deck with two out in the first.

Cullenbine Leads Attack

Cullenbine was the first Tiger to show up in the fourth and this time he banged a double into right, scoring eventually on Bob Maier's fly ball. Cullenbine also led off in the sixth. This time Humphries plunked him in the ribs with a pitched ball. After York had filed out, Cramer singled to center. Outlaw forced Cramer at second and Humphries, who covered first base in an effort for a double play let the throw escape, Cullenbine tearing home for the third time.

The Sox flurry in the ninth opened with Trout passing Cuccinello after which Farrell singled, Cuccinello taking third on the hit and scoring while Michaels was forcing Farrell. Tresh walked and Bill Nagel, batting for Ross, grounded into a forceout. When Moses walked, Trout conceded he was thru. Newhouser appeared and his first move was a balk on which Michaels scored. Then York consumed Schalk's pop up for the final out.

Dickshot Hits Triple

Two were out in the second inning of the second game before the Sox gave any indication of doing a bit of scoring. Nagel walked, Cass Michaels singled, and Mike Tresh walked, filling the bases. Grove helped himself to a single and two of his pals dashed home, but the splurge subsided on Oris Hockett's roller to Eddie Mayo.

Tresh singled to set up the four run incident in the fifth. After Grove had been retired, Hockett doubled to right center and Tresh scored. Hockett got home with the help of a single by Schalk and, when Curtright singled, Overmire was ordered to vacate the premises. Wilson took over and was warmly greeted by Dickshot, who tripled to right center, Schalk and Curtright counting. Curtright and Dickshot also figured in the seventh

RALLIES IN 8TH INNING DECIDE BOTH CONTESTS

Bill Nicholson Hits 3 Run Homer

BY EDWARD BURNS

The Cubs were trailing the Cincinnati Reds going into their eighth inning in each game of the double header before 28,746 in Wrigley field yesterday. Then bang! bang! bang! four runs and a 10 to 7 victory in the eighth inning of the first game; four runs and a 7 to 4 victory in the eighth inning of the second game!

Thus the Cubs swept the four game series from the Reds, who came to town last Friday with a record of 11 victories in their last 12 games. The four straight victories moved the Cubs into fourth place in the National league standings and they closed yesterday only three games behind the leading Giants, who recently led them by nine games.

Cubs Make Home Runs Count

Homers, Cub homers, whizzed out of the arena just when they were needed most. Heinz Becker and Andy Pafko propelled maximum shots in the first game. Bill Nicholson and Mickey Livingston knocked successive homers after two were out in the eighth inning of the second game. Nicholson's, his fifth of the year, went into the bleachers in dead center and was good for three runs, which lifted the Cubs from a 4 to 3 deficit to a 6 to 4 lead. The smash with which Livingston followed was his first homer of the year.

Paul Erickson, who made only two pitches to effect the third putout after the Reds had gone ahead in the eighth, was the winning pitcher in the first game. Ray Prim started but did not survive the first inning. Mack Stewart succeeded Prim and struggled nobly until the Reds loaded the bases with none out in the eighth. Bob Chipman followed Stewart, then Erickson made his brief appearance. Paul Derringer pitched the ninth and retired the Reds in order.

Claude Passeau went all the way in the second game to register his fourth victory, his second over the Reds. He yielded a dozen hits, but bore down effectively to get out of jams which came early in the Reds' scoring innings.

Becker, Pafko Pace Hitters

Becker and Pafko, both Cub bench riders not so many days ago, were the big, strong glamor boys in the first game and added necessary power in the second contest. Heins knocked a two run homer in the first inning to put the Cubs ahead, 3 to 2, and then, after the Reds had scored three runs to go ahead in the first of the eighth, Becker singled home Stan Hack and Don Johnson with the tying and winning runs. Pafko tripled in the seventh to break a 4 to 4 tie, driving Phil Cavarretta home and scoring himself on an infield out. Then, in the eighth he knocked a homer, his fourth of the year, to score Becker and give the Cubs insurance in the ninth. Becker and Pafko each doubled in the first inning of the second game and a pass to Becker and a single by Pafko kept the eighth inning of the second game alive for Nicholson's big act.

Nicholson Hits Double, Too

Nicholson's homer in the eighth inning of the second game wasn't his only socking performance of the afternoon. In the seventh inning of the second game the Cubs were trailing 3 to 2. Nick opened the seventh with a double and got home with a momentarily tying run on a pinch single by Paul Gillespie.

The big crowd saw plenty of action in the first inning of the first game. Prim made Williams pop to Johnson at the start of the game but Clay followed with a double to left center. Walker beat out a bunt, Clay stopping at third. Clay scored on McCormick's fly to Pafko.

Becker Hits 2-Run Homer

Hack opened the Cub offensive with a double to left center and scored on Johnson's single to right. Becker, batting left handed, drove the ball into the bleacher in left center, about 25 feet to the left of Joe Zarhardt of Morrisburg, Pa., snatched third place money of $1,000 by turning in a 71 to defeat Ed Furgol, Detroit amateur who came home in 274 for fourth spot. Furgol, who was running second yesterday, was two over par with a 74 for the last round.

Hoop Jr. Begins Second Lap in Quest of Turf's Triple Crown

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Louisville, Ky., June 10—Now comes the Preakness, center jewel in racing's triple crown for the elite of the nation's 3 year old performers, and the next objective of Hoop Jr., the Alabama thorobred which yesterday made the 71st Kentucky Derby a runaway affair.

Hoop Jr.

The handsome bay offspring of the imported Sir Gallahad III., a 6 length victor in Churchill Downs' historic mile and a quarter classic which drew a field of 16 seeking the largest purse in the race's history, left Louisville this morning for Pimlico, where next Saturday he will be sent against several of the horses he beat so badly yesterday and Walter Jeffords' sensational Pavot, among others.

Jones Praises Arcaro's Ride

Hoop Jr., owned by Fred W. Hooper of Birmingham, Ala., and Jacksonville, Fla., was the toast of Louisville today despite excuses thousands tried to find for Warren Wright's Pot o' Luck, a badly whipped second, but a courageous and swift stretch runner. Ben Jones, the great conditioner who trains the Calumet farm thorobreds, was not among them, however. Jones' comment was, "Hoop Jr. ran a great race and was given an unexcelled ride by Eddie Arcaro."

Jones said on Derby eve that while he expected Pot o' Luck to be in the money, he was afraid he couldn't compete with the mud-running Hoop Jr. A fast track may have made a difference in the result, but Arcaro got the winner off fast from his advantageous post position in the middle of the track and there never was any doubt about the outcome once he swung into the lead a few yards from the starting gate.

Pot o' Luck Has Another Chance

At any rate, Pot o' Luck will have a chance to even the score next Saturday, for Warren Wright, a former Chicagoan, is sending him eastward today. The other Derby horses eligible and likely to contest the issue with Hoop Jr. in the $50,000 added mile and three-sixteenths race are Mrs. W. G. Lewis' Darby Dieppe, fast closing third in the Derby; E. R. Bradley's Burning Dream, which has a lot of speed under favorable track conditions; Col. C. V. Whitney's Jeep, winner of one division of the Wood Memorial but a poor fifth yesterday; J. K. Houssels' Bymeabond, the only horse that got within a length and a half of Hoop Jr. after he really got going, and Charles S. Howard's Sea Swallow, winner of the Tia Juana Derby and a son of the great Seabiscuit.

Pavot's in This Race!

It is going to be something to watch Pavot and Hoop Jr. hook up in the 55th Preakness, for Pavot was unbeaten in eight races as a 2 year old and while beaten in the Withers Mile recently by Polynesian, he wasn't disgraced and was close on the winner's heels at the wire. Polynesian also is eligible for the Preakness which will be a one day "meeting" in Maryland's old Civil war racing plant. Pimlico held a 10 day spring session and will be reopened just for the big race and a program which includes the $30,000 Dixie Handicap, the $20,000 Pimlico Oaks, the $5,000 Jennings Handicap, and the $5,000 Nursery stakes in which Hoop Jr. was beaten by Dockstader and Arcaro last year.

YANKEES DEAL FERRISS FIRST LOSS IN 9 GAMES

New York, June 10 (AP)—The sensational winning streak of Dave [Boo] Ferriss was brought to an end today as the New York Yankees won a 3 to 2 victory from the Red Sox and the rookie right hander in the first game of a double header after Ferriss had won his first eight games.

A crowd of 38,114 paid saw Jim Turner come to the relief of Hank Borowy in the ninth inning to halt a Boston rally with the tying run on base. Borowy, in scoring his eighth triumph against one loss, tied Ferriss for the American league pitching leadership.

The second game was called because of rain with the Red Sox ahead 1 to 0 after one and a half innings. It will be played on Aug. 30.

Fan Charges Leo Durocher with Assault

New York, June 10 (AP)—Leo Durocher, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and Joseph Moore, 50, a special policeman employed at Ebbets field, were arrested today on a charge of feloniously assaulting a fan who attended the Brooklyn-Philadelphia baseball game last night.

Louis Andriozzi, Kings county assistant district attorney, said he ordered the arrests after John Christian, 21, of Brooklyn, a United States custom guard, identified Durocher and Moore as the two men who, Christian said, beat him because he had heckled Durocher during the game.

Police said Durocher and Moore denied they had hit any one last night. They were booked at a Brooklyn police station and later released in $1,000 bail each. They will be arraigned in Brooklyn Felony court tomorrow.

Christian, an honorably discharged army veteran, is in Kings County hospital with a fractured jaw and other injuries.

Foreman Will Defend State Golf Crown

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

Chicago's fourth crowded war time season will get down to a serious business this week with a program climaxed by the 15th annual Illinois state amateur tournament at St. Charles Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and the veterans' rehabilitation event at Twin Orchard on Sunday.

Harold Foreman Jr., long hitting Lake Shore giant, who won the 1943 state amateur championship at Peoria's Mount Hawley club, will return to defend his title at St. Charles. Arrayed against him will be one of the best fields ever to come up to the state meet, including as it does three former winners of the honor. This trio includes Jim Frisina of Springfield, victor in 1942; Gus Moreland of Peoria, the one time Texan who won the 1931 Western Amateur championship and was a Walker cup star, and George Dawson, Glen Oak veteran who scored in 1939 and 1941. Other standout entries are John Lehman of Edgewater, former Western and C. D. G. A. titleholder, and Pick Wagner of North Shore, Northwestern U. swinger.

Low 32 in Championship Flight

The tournament will begin Thursday with a 36 hole qualifying round, the low 32 scorers therein gaining the championship match play bracket.

The Sunday event at Twin Orchard already has enlisted 30 members of the Illinois section of the Professional Golfers' Association of America. All proceeds of the 18 hole competition will be directed into the Illinois phase of the national P. G. A. campaign for providing golf facilities for hospitalized service men thruout the country.

Westward Ho Tourney Friday

In addition to the above tournaments, the Builders' Tee club will gather at Westgate Valley tomorrow, Elmhurst will hold its 45th annual Blowout event on Wednesday, and the Illini Club of Chicago will conduct its annual golf outing at Westward Ho on Friday.

URGES U. S. USE OF 'COST PLUS' BASIS FOR FOOD

Hunger Is Possible, Dairyman Warns

Principal foods must be placed on the same cost-plus production basis as that used successfully in turning out fighting materials if the United States is to avert hunger, Owen M. Richards, manager of the American Dairy association, contended yesterday.

The repeated government warnings of reduced food supplies for civilians and finally the recent action taken to limit rations of military forces even in the face of a hard war over the longest supply line in military history proves the inadequacies of past government handling, Richards said.

Five Proposals Offered

"The solution of the food problem calls for a program of production," he asserted. "You can't solve the butter problem by making it cost 24 points a pound. You can't share what you don't have."

Richards urged these steps:

1. Shift the emphasis from distribution to production of food.

2. Direct man power being released by war plants to the food producing industry instead of unemployment ranks.

3. Shift food production from a system of "cost-loss" to the government's war time production formula of cost-plus. Adjustment in ceiling limitations will stimulate production sufficiently to relieve acute shortages and save money by stamping out black markets.

4. Utilize the experience of the men in the industry to help solve problems.

5. Establish responsibility with authority delegated to initiate and carry thru a production program.

Warns Position Is Critical

If a drouth or some other "freak" of nature should blight food producing areas hunger would be likely, said Richards, because food reserves could not last thru a catastrophe.

The food problem is critical and must be solved at once, he warned. This country cannot continue under policies that have resulted in the smallest May butter production since 1928 and cattle yielding only 300 pounds of meat per head instead of about 800 pounds.

Wickard Had 'Gestapo' to Run REA, Former Head Charges

BY ROBERT YOUNG
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., June 10 — Harry Slattery, former administrator of the rural electrification administration, today urged the senate to reject the nomination of Secretary of Agriculture Wickard as REA head in making public a letter to the late President Roosevelt in which Slattery charged Wickard had used the agency, a part of the agriculture department, as a "political football." The senate agriculture committee begins hearings on Wickard's nomination tomorrow. He soon will be succeeded as agricultural secretary by Rep. Anderson [D., N. M.]

Harry Slattery

The charges against Wickard were set forth in a hitherto undisclosed letter of resignation which Slattery sent last November, Slattery said he was releasing the letter because "the public interest so requires."

Calls Neal Real Head

Slattery, whose resignation was accepted by Mr. Roosevelt early last December, wrote that the actual head of the REA was William J. Neal, then deputy administrator and now acting administrator. Slattery said Wickard deliberately selected Neal to "freeze" him out of his congressionally authorized duties.

"Now what sort of a regime have Mr. Wickard and Mr. Neal established in REA?" Slattery said in his letter. "If I were to summarize it simply, I would say double talk, a Gestapo spy system, and double-dealings.

"Confusion is piled upon confusion, politics upon politics, and waste of public funds under a political regime established by Secretary Wickard that makes it utterly impossible for me as administrator to carry out my duties as prescribed by law. I say to you in all candor that this reeks of a national scandal and is a violation of the letter and spirit of congressional law."

Lips Sealed by F. D. R.

In accepting the resignation, Mr. Roosevelt wrote on Dec. 8 that in view of the conclusions Slattery had reached "after such mature deliberation," there was no alternative but to comply with Slattery's request that he be permitted to leave his REA post. Slattery said in his letter that he was prohibited from making his charges public because of Mr. Roosevelt's order to federal officials not to engage in public controversies.

"Under very clear orders issued by you," he wrote, "My lips are sealed and my hands are tied."

Big Firms Bid for University Trained Help

Almost all major American businesses are planning aggressively for post-war operations and are recruiting personnel to fill the projected jobs, the Northwestern National Life Insurance company, Minneapolis, Minn., reported yesterday.

This conclusion was drawn from a study of replies to a questionnaire sent to placement officials of 116 universities and colleges thruout the country. Besides listing the most active industries, these men reported there were three to 10 job offers for each available graduate.

N. U. Reports Big Demand

Northwestern university's school of engineering listed, in the order named, manufacturers of automobiles, diesel engines, and harvesting machines, and contracting companies as the most active in anticipating post-war activity. The report of the University of Illinois was the same except that it added electric household appliance makers.

At Marquette university the principal demand is for graduates trained in electronics. Michigan reported a spirited demand for students of accounting, statistics and market analysis, and Notre Dame has had a heavy call for young men trained in accounting and selling.

Plastics Industry Seeks Help

Columbia university's school of business found the most active planning and recruiting among the various plastics, automotive, and rubber industries. Retail merchandising, air transportation, insurance, and market analysis fields offered the most job opportunities at Ohio State.

At the University of Texas the demand is for graduates who can fill jobs in companies in the petroleum, air transportation, electrical, and chemical industries. Representatives of consumer food industries have done the most active scouting at the University of Alabama.

RENTAL CEILINGS BOOST REQUESTS EXPECTED TODAY

Washington, D. C., June 10 (AP)—The National Association of Real Estate Boards is expected to ask congress tomorrow for a general increase in residential rent ceilings. An organization of apartment house owners also is expected to request a 15 per cent increase in apartment rent ceilings.

James C. Downs Jr., Park Ridge, Ill., will appear before the house banking committee tomorrow on behalf of the real estate boards. The committee is considering legislation to extend the life of OPA.

People and Events

Corn Products Refining company's plant at Argo, Ill., has received the National Safety council's highest war time award for the third consecutive year, the council said yesterday.

Arthur W. Cleaveland, manager of the insurance department of the Pure Oil company, will retire July 1 after 27 years with the company. Edwin T. Berquist, who has been assistant manager of the insurance department, will succeed him.

Dr. Horace L. Sipple has been appointed director of the research and educational program of the Evaporated Milk association.

CIVILIAN HEAVY TIRE QUOTA SET FOR 3D QUARTER

Washington, D. C., June 10 (AP)—The WPB has allocated 1,863,155 truck and bus tires to the office of defense transportation for civilian replacement purposes in the July quarter, ODT Director Johnson said today. The number was 71 per cent of the 2,633,000 tires requested.

Johnson said there has been some improvement in the supply of smaller sized commercial tires, but that heavy duty truck and bus tires will continue in tight supply "because military needs for the larger sized tires must be met to speed winning the war in the Pacific."

He reminded commercial operators that tire wear is twice as great in hot weather and said the need for conservation of all tires will be doubly important in summer months.

APRIL INCOMES OF INDIVIDUALS DROP 4 PER CENT

Washington, D. C., June 10 (AP)—United States individuals received 4 per cent less income in April than in March, the sharpest monthly drop in six years, the commerce department announced today.

Total income payments to individuals—including salaries, wages, dividends, interest, and income from rents and royalties— was 13 billion 180 million dollars for April, compared with 13 billion 686 million for March. The April total, however, was 5 per cent above the 12 billion 582 million of April, 1944.

The decrease from March to April was attributed by the department to a sharp drop in payments by retail trade establishments and a continued decline in pay rolls in manufacturing.

WHEAT DUMPED IN FIELD; LACK OF CARS ACUTE

Harvest of Big Crop Only Beginning

Kansas City, Mo., June 10 (AP) — Farmers are dumping the new wheat crop on the ground, just as grain men predicted unless something was done about box cars to move grain from glutted country elevators.

[A meeting of railroad officials on the grain car situation in Chicago Saturday ended without any announcement of measures to be taken, but some plan to alleviate the car shortage in the wheat belt is expected to be announced today or tomorrow by the Association of American Railroads.]

Combines started rolling this week in southern Oklahoma and with only a fraction of the golden crop cut, harvest crews already are dumping wheat in the fields.

Kansas Harvest Not Started

In Kansas, center of the wheat belt, the harvest isn't even under way. When it starts in a week or so, grain men expect an even more critical situation with a prospective crop of 165 to 200 million bushels to be added to already crowded elevators.

The dumping was at El Dorado, Okla., Saturday, when four elevators turned away loaded wheat trucks because they could neither store the grain nor get cars to move it to terminal markets.

Only 31 carloads had been shipped from the area, one of Oklahoma's larger wheat-producing sections. Forty more carloads were stored in vacant houses, barns, and on the ground.

ODT Assistance Sought

Grain men, farmers, and state officials have sought for several months to get the office of defense transportation to heed their plea for help. A "grass roots" conference here several weeks ago sent a delegation to Washington where it was assured by the interstate commerce commission and the ODT that an effort would be made to route more empty cars back into the midwest.

There was improvement for a time but still there are not enough cars for the grain belt's needs.

BRITAIN PERMITS AUTO OUTPUT OF 200,000 IN YEAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, June 10—The government today approved automobile industry plans to turn out 200,000 private cars in the next 12 months, of which 40,000 are expected to be built this year. Sales will be restricted to licensees of the ministry of war transport.

The board of trade and the ministry of supply, which gave the approval, added the proviso that 50 per cent of total production must be allocated for the export market.

A spokesman for the Nuffield organization said the company has orders for 35,000 cars from buyers in South Africa, New Zealand, India, Australia, and some liberated European countries.

FEDERAL COSTS 3 TIMES PRE-WAR RATE PREDICTED

Washington, D. C., June 10 (AP)—A conclusion that post-war costs of the federal government will be two and one-half to three times the 1940 figure was announced today by the Brookings institution.

A study conducted for it by Lewis H. Kimmel & Associates estimated that the over-all expenditures for government — federal, state, and local—will be roughly double the pre-war total. Federal cash expenditures in 1949 were estimated at 22.3 billion dollars. State and local government spending will be roughly one-fourth higher than the pre-war total of 9 billion a year.

Predict SWPC Loan Volume Will Increase

Altho the peak in war production has passed, loans by the Smaller War Plants corporation to small companies engaged in war production or production of essential civilian goods have not slackened and the agency expects its loan volume to increase during reconversion, Victor Fabian, Chicago district manager, said yesterday. The SWPC will observe its third anniversary today.

To date the Chicago district office has approved more than 200 loan applications for a total of $25,259,388, with many companies receiving from four to eight loans. Loan applications pending amount to approximately 4½ million dollars.

Finance War Contracts

The loan division has enabled many companies to fill large government war contracts they were unable to finance alone, said Frank T. Murphy, district loan agent. Some have improved their cash position after SWPC assistance and are able to finance production without the aid of banks or other financial institutions, he said.

The SWPC was created by congress within the war production board on June 11, 1942. A regional office was set up in Chicago the following December.

Since then Fabian, with a staff of assistants that has grown from four to 12, has registered the productive capacity, tooling, number of employes, and other information on 3,000 of the 10,000 small plants in the district. In addition to making loans, the agency acts as go-between for the plants and government procurement agencies. SWPC was instrumental in placing about 80 contracts a month at first, and reached a peak of 844 contracts last November. Dollar value of the contracts has risen from a few thousands to a high of $36,601,773 in March.

Fights Small Firms' Battles

SWPC also pleads the cases of the small plants with the WPB for materials, the WMC for labor, and the OPA for price relief and other difficulties, Fabian said. It handles contract termination problems, space, tools, and equipment problems, reconversion problems, and procurement of surplus materials, and reviews foreign patents for possible use. A recent survey showed more plants were interested in getting machine tools than in any other phase of SWPC service. Labor problems came next and financial help third.

Another SWPC activity is its technical advisory service, thru which any plant with a production problem may obtain advice which SWPC has culled from other plants which have solved the same problem, or which has been solved by SWPC research.

Steel Strikers Reject WLB Order to Work

Birmingham, Ala., June 10 (AP)—Striking blast furnace employes of the Tennessee Coal, Iron, and Railroad company rejected overwhelmingly today a war labor board demand that they return to work, thus leaving idle the south's two largest steel plants. A CIO United Steel Workers official said the men voted 20 to 1 against resuming work before the company revokes its suspension of 21 men who had engaged in an unauthorized strike.

BONUS BONDS DUE JUNE 15

A veteran of World War I. holds adjusted service [bonus] bonds due June 15, 1945. Is it necessary to present these bonds for redemption on or before June 15 or will they be honored at full face value and accrued interest at any time thereafter?—V. T.

As a matter of businesslike procedure, bonds should always be presented for payment when due. But in the case of the government matured bonds doubtless would be paid, whenever presented, at full face value, plus any unpaid interest to the maturity date.

Prompt action is necessary to avoid loss of interest, which ceases to accrue after maturity. A good plan would be to re-invest the proceeds of the bonus bonds in war savings bonds, on which interest accrues from June 1 if purchased any time during that month.

Thru the maturity of these 3 per cent bonds the veterans will receive approximately 275 million dollars, including nine years' accumulated interest. The principal amounts to nearly 217 million out of the 1 billion 847 million originally issued, and interest to about 59 million.

The bonds may be presented at any postoffice, which on proper identification will certify to the veteran's indorsement and will forward the bonds to the appropriate federal reserve bank. Or a veteran may either present the bonds at the federal reserve bank of his district or send them, indorsed, with request for payment, direct to the treasury in Washington, D. C. The treasury department has requested veterans to forward the bonds in advance of the maturity date. Bonds received on and after May 15 are assumed to be for redemption on June 15 unless earlier redemption instructions are given by the owner.

FIRST PACIFIC GIs IN FORT SHERIDAN FOR DISCHARGES

Veterans Discuss Plans for Civilian Life

First soldiers from the Pacific area to be sent home under the point discharge system—47 of them—arrived at Fort Sheridan yesterday.

For 30 of them, the war is over. They will be discharged tomorrow morning at Fort Sheridan.

The other 17, all members of the army air forces, will be returned to duty as irreplaceable personnel after 30 day furloughs, even tho they have accumulated enough points for discharge."

Discuss Civilian Plans

The soldiers to be discharged spent the afternoon in the post exchange discussing their plans for civilian life. All were reluctant to discuss their war experiences. They agreed the war is "pretty rugged."

Pvt. William T. Elliott, 815 Roscoe st., who has accumulated 121 points, was a soda dispenser in a loop drug store before entering the army in May, 1941. He wants to get a railroad job. He participated in the Philippines and Okinawa campaigns, and was in three major battles.

Wants to Be a Policeman

Master Sgt. Thomas V. Gainer, 9910 Prospect av., who used to work for a steel company, wants to be a policeman. He participated in major battles at Macon and Saipan. He holds 99 points.

"It's sure good to be home," said Pvt. Lorenzo Williams, 517 E. 32d st., who fought at Saipan, Leyte, Cruna Shima, and Okinawa in 30 months overseas. He was a student at Wendell Phillips High school when he entered the army in January, 1940. Now he wants to try for civil service. Pvt. Joseph B. Wojnarowski, 8932 Baltimore av., who has been in the army since 1935 and overseas since 1939, wants to get a railroad job. Pvt. William Chapman, 5814 Indiana av., overseas for 28 months, with action in the New Hebrides, Munda, Saipan, and Guadalcanal, wants to enter the postal service. He used to be a shoe store clerk.

Will Take It Easy

Pvt. Louis A. Delmonte, 7542 S. Hermitage av., who entered the army in 1941 and was at Pearl Harbor when the Japs attacked, said he plans to take it easy for a while. "Boy, am I glad to see the good old U. S. A. again," he said.

Sgt. Henri I. Prawdzik, 221 W. 63d st., has been in the army more than 3 years and has accumulated 120 points. He also was at Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941. "I plan to go right to work at anything I can find," he said. Tech. Sgt. Erwin T. Woods of Rock Island, in the army since 1939, will get a baseball tryout.

Other Chicagoans in the group included Tech. Sgt. Ray A. Bergmann, 2941 Van Buren st., 116 points; Staff Sgt. Alvin O. Thorsen, 2617 Attrill st., 151 points, and Staff Sgt. George D. Misunas, 411 S. Richmond st., 111 points.

Staff Sgt. Henry Terlep, former Chicagoan whose parents now live on a farm near Cassopolis, Mich., said: "I'm mighty lucky to get back." He has been in the army six years as an auto mechanic. He expects to continue as a mechanic in civilian life.

Inquiring Camera Girl

THE QUESTION

Were you ever embarrassed when trying to make a good impression on your date's parents?

WHERE ASKED

Hyde Park High school [asked of students].

THE ANSWERS

Ted Schwartz, 5117 University av.—A new date took me to her home and introduced me to her parents. They didn't ask me any questions, but I was trying to make conversation and told them about myself. They listened until I had finished and then her mother said, "Oh, I remember you. I gave you your first bath!"

Larry Berg, 6807 Merrill av.—I called up my girl and was asking her how she'd been, etc., and then asked her for a date. She agreed to go out with me but added, "I think you've made a slight error. This is Mrs. Jon and not her daughter." I had to follow thru and take the girl's mother out.

Leo Gorenstein, 5465 Greenwood av.—The first time I met my date's parents I asked to take them to a movie with their daughter. I mentioned that my father owned a factory and indicated that I had enough money. When we arrived at the theater, I discovered I had no money with me and her father had to buy the tickets.

George Moskovitz, 5428 Ellis av.—A friend lent me his car for a date and I offered to drive my girl's father and mother to a party. I pretended I owned the car and they naturally thought — "Hummm, evidently wealthy." At a stop sign I met the owner of the car and he said, "Hi, take good care of my car—will you?"

Marvin Lasch, 5006 Blackstone av. —I was invited to a wedding anniversary party at my friend's house. There were a lot of people present. That made me feel at ease because her parents wouldn't have much time to concentrate on me. While in the living room I backed into a table and broke a Chinese lamp that was irreplaceable.

Sonny Loob, 5412 Ingleside av. — All dressed up in my Sunday best and carrying a corsage, I rang the bell of my girl friend's house to attend a party she was having. Her mother met me at the door with a handkerchief tied around her head and wearing a house dress. The party was scheduled for the next week. We were both embarrassed.

HINES NEEDS 195 MORE WORKERS FOR VETS' CARE

For the veterans returning to Hines hospital on stretchers, their fighting days are over. But the veterans' administration staff is in need of 195 new workers to maintain complete service to the wounded.

Charles G. Beck, manager of the veterans' administration hospital at Hines, said the war man power commission has authorized the United States employment service to place Hines workers on a No. 3 priority basis so the hospital administration may acquire, as soon as possible, 25 men and 40 women mess attendants, 25 nurses' aids, 25 typists and stenographers, and 10 general office clerks.

"The veterans deserve the best care the country affords," Beck said. "and we are trying to give it to them. Our chief difficulty is lack of personnel. Five hundred beds have been added at Hines to receive a new influx of disabled veterans returning from fronts from the Aleutians to Okinawa."

HOLD 12 IN ROW IN TAVERN OVER UNSERVED DRINK

When Miss Louise Meredith, 19, of 2952 Jackson blvd., a waitress in a tavern at 2251 Madison st., refused to serve Lorenzo Lovings, 31, Negro, 212 N. Artesian av., a drink early yesterday, he threw a bottle at her.

As a result of the ensuing brawl, police arrested Lovings and eight other men, Miss Meredith, Miss Jackie May, 25, of 1812 Washington blvd., another waitress, and Mrs. Josephine Ugo, 24, owner of the tavern. All will appear in Women's court today.

One of those arrested, Edward Shannon, 25, Negro, of 313 Polk st., is in Bridewell hospital with cuts on his hands and face.
